

Ford calls inflation top problem

Shapes administration after 'nightmare' of Watergate

WASHINGTON — President Ford declared Friday that controlling inflation would be the "high and first priority" of his administration.

Ford met with his economic advisers just after he became president, and the economists reported that the nation's economic problems were steadily growing worse.

One top administration economist said inflation would more likely be in the 8 to 9 per cent range than the 7 per cent that the Nixon administration had been forecasting for the end of the year. He said a review of inflation problems was begun immediately.

Ford announced that Treasury Secretary William E. Simon would remain on a permanent basis and reaffirmed the Nixon appointment of economics consultant Alan Greenspan to succeed Herbert Stein as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

FORD will address a joint session of Congress on television at 6 p.m. PDT Monday to outline what he called "the priority business of the nation."

Ford, in taking office as the 38th president of the United States Friday, pronounced an end to "our long national nightmare" over Watergate, then set about the business of shaping his administration.

In swift succession he met with congressional leaders, with senior aides to the resigned Richard M. Nixon, with the economic advisers, diplomats, and a group of personal associates who will counsel him on selecting a White House staff. Ford asked all of Nixon's key aides to remain on the job during the time of transition.

The 61-year-old former vice president and House Republican leader wore a plain business suit for his historic swearing-in.

Raising his right hand, Ford rested his left hand on a Bible held by his wife and opened to one of his favorite passages, the fifth and sixth verses of the third chapter of Proverbs:

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy path."

He was surrounded by family, national officialdom and old comrades in politics. His voice was firm when he took the oath of office.

Ford concluded his oath — "so help me God" — at 12:03 p.m. EDT. It was administered by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in the East Room of the White House.

Actually, Ford assumed the powers of the presidency 28 minutes earlier, when Nixon's formal resignation was

In tape recording Man claims L.A. airport bombing

Associated Press

A tape recording of a man's voice claiming responsibility for Tuesday's fatal bombing at Los Angeles International Airport was found by police Friday in a trash can in front of a suburban bank, police said.

Police said they also found a key which the recorded voice said fit the airport locker in which the bomb was placed.

Acting on an anonymous telephone tip, police and FBI agents found the recording and the key wrapped in a green napkin inside a trash can in front of the Atlantic Blvd. bank in Maywood east of Los Angeles shortly after 4 p.m. Friday.

Los Angeles Police Capt. Mervin King said the caller telephoned the Los Angeles office of CBS network news and disclosed the location of the trash can.

A CBS spokesman said the caller spoke with a "thick Midwest accent" and said he was responsible for the bombing. The man also said "not all of the explosives he planted at the airport went off," the spokesman said.

He said the caller claimed to be the same man who telephoned the Los Angeles Herald Examiner late Tuesday with information allegedly about the bomb and locker. Police still are checking the earlier call.

King said the cassette recording lasted six to eight minutes. He said the male voice claimed to have planted the bomb and "made threats." King gave no details of the threats.

Two airline employees were killed and 36 persons were injured when the powerful bomb exploded early Tuesday inside a locker at a Pan American World Airways lobby.

Syria shoots down U.N. plane, kills 9

United Press International

Syrian antiaircraft guns firing at Israeli warplanes shot down a United Nations plane carrying Canadian members of the Middle East peacekeeping force Friday, killing all nine persons aboard, U.N. sources reported.

In Ottawa, an External Affairs spokesman said Canada has asked the U.N. to investigate whether the plane had received flight clearances from both Syria and Israel.

"If the reports are correct, we would view it as a very serious situation," the Canadian spokesman said. "But before any protests are made, we would have to clarify things to see who was responsible."

The sources at U.N. headquarters in New York said Syria admitted that one of its missiles shot down the plane. An official of the Syrian civilian Aviation Department implied earlier that the plane could have been downed by the Syrian fire. U.N. spokesmen said the plane crashed near Dima, about 13 miles west of Damascus on the Damascus-Beirut highway and near the Lebanese border, while on a flight from the Suez Canal city of Ismailia to the Syrian capital.

In Ottawa, Canadian Defense Department officials identified the plane as a Canadian Buffalo aircraft with a Canadian crew. It was believed the passengers also were Canadians.

"It happened that while the engagement was in progress, a special U.N. plane carrying six passengers passed through the area," the Syrian official said.

"Contact with the plane was lost and it later transpired it had crashed in Syrian territory. Syrian rescue squads immediately headed to the scene of the crash and a technical committee began work at once to determine the cause of the crash."

Citizen Richard Milhous Nixon, whose political career began in California more than 25 years ago and ended in Washington Thursday when he resigned as President, returned home Friday to the cheers of his home-county crowd.

The smiling former chief executive, accompanied by his wife, Pat, daughter, Tricia, and an assortment of dogs and birds, was greeted by an estimated crowd of 7,000 flag-waving fans as his plane touched down at the El Toro Marine Corps Air Station three hours after he formally resigned his office — the first president in American history to do so.

Also in the party were Edward Cox, Tricia's husband; Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, and Stephen Bull, his appointments secretary.

Daughter Julie and her husband, David Eisenhower, remained in Washington to supervise packing of the remainder of the Nixon effects.

Following a short off-the-cuff speech in which he pledged he would not stop working for the cause of world peace, the former president and his family boarded a helicopter for the short flight to his San Clemente home. As the Nixons boarded the copter the obviously partisan crowd continued to cheer, then burst into singing "God Bless America."

"To all of you who have been so kind to make the effort to come to El Toro and welcome us back home, I say thank you very much," he told the crowd. "But, in a way, of course, we have never really left you. We have lived here, visited here and traveled all over California in these past years."

"In the years we have had the privilege of serving in the highest office in the land, the messages we have received from all over the country have warmed our hearts, but we feel the ones that have meant the most have been those we have received from right here in California."

NIXON'S plane, "The Spirit of 76," touched down at the air station at 11:57 a.m., just three hours after his successor was sworn into office. As the wheels touched ground, the crowds which jammed grandstands on both sides of the airport tower burst into cheers and waved hats, hankies and small American flags. The cheers rose even as the first of the Nixons' three dogs were escorted from the rear door of the airplane. But the thunderous applause was held until the former chief executive and his wife made their appearance at the front door of the airplane.

"I think the speeches have been made," the smiling Nixon told the crowd via a microphone placed near the aircraft, "and this is no time to bore you with another one, but it is appropriate to say this: Having completed one task does not mean that we'll sit in this marvelous California sun and do nothing."

Tricia, dressed in a wispy summer dress of yellow, stood with her father at the microphone as he spoke. Mrs. Nixon, in pink and white, stood in the background.

Referring to the aircraft which brought him home to California as one he would never forget because it also took him to Russia, China and the Middle East, the former chief executive also referred to his search for world peace.

"Over the last five and a half years we're proud we have brought this whole world closer to the dream of peace," he said to the applause of the crowd by his statement that "I am going to continue — we are all going to continue — to be proud of the fact that we, too, are Californians, and we're home again."

In a final act, the ex-president walked over to the Air Force crew that had flown him on his final Air Force One trip to shake hands with them and thank them. It was at this point that the crowd began to sing "God Bless America."

Nixon concluded to cheers brought from the crowd by his statement that "I am going to continue — we are all going to continue — to be proud of the fact that we, too, are Californians, and we're home again."

... to a mountain of problems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Private citizen Richard M. Nixon faces a mountain of legal and financial problems.

Legally he could be prosecuted and perhaps go to jail for his role in the Watergate cover-up. At a minimum he probably will be called to testify at the cover-up trial of six of his former aides in September.

Financially he paid $284,706 in back taxes last spring and faces a further tax bill, substantial payments on his two homes, and could have costly legal expenses in the coming months.

On the plus side, Nixon's resignation saved a $60,000 a year pension he would have lost had he been impeached and removed from office, plus $96,000 a year for office staff and expenses, and free office space.

Without giving any hint whether criminal charges may be brought against the former president, Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski announced Thursday night immediately after Nixon's resignation speech that he had promised Nixon nothing and has engaged in no plea bargaining.

"There has been no agreement or understanding of any sort between the President or his representatives and the special prosecutor relating in any way to the president's resignation," Jaworski said in a statement.

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., has introduced a resolution that would make it the "sense of Congress" that Nixon not be prosecuted for any criminal offense. The resolution is not popular among Democrats.

Cyprus truce OKd; Geneva talks lag

NICOSIA (UPI) — Greek and Turkish army representatives signed an agreement Friday to separate their armies on Cyprus, but in Geneva the two nations failed again to hammer out a permanent political settlement for the strategic island.

British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said at the Geneva peace talks that he and the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey would meet for a third day this morning and would include Cyprus President Glafkos Clerides and Vice President Rauf Denktaş for the first time.

"There is movement, but whether it is acceptable or not remains to be seen," Callaghan said. But one conference delegate said, "The situation does not look too good."

The smiles and handshakes at the Nicosia ceremony contrasted with the heavy fighting 24 hours earlier along the "green line" dividing Greek and Turkish communities. No fighting was heard in Nicosia Friday.

Reformer's cure: oust old-timers

Tony Hodges wants voters to cast their ballots against any incumbent seeking a third term as the first step toward a new American revolution.

Hodges, a 34-year-old former airline pilot turned people's advocate, describes himself as a "citizen." He is also the chief spokesman for the fledgling political action group known as the "New American Revolution" (NAR), based in Washington, D.C.

Speaking on the steps of Iowa's statehouse in Des Moines this week, Hodges said NAR has two primary goals designed to turn the governmental process back over to the people.

First, he said, Americans this fall should vote against all incumbents who have held office for two or more consecutive terms. Second they should

"We think government has failed the people at many levels," Hodges added, "and we think the ones to blame are those who have been in power the longest."

Unwanted

The British Home Office seems to have a real hangup over George Raft. For the third time in seven years, the 73-year-old former star of Hollywood gangster films has been barred from the country.

Raft was expelled from Britain in 1967 by Laborite Roy Jenkins, then as now Home Secretary, when he was working as host of a Mayfair District gambling club in London. His appeal for re-entry was turned down in 1971 by Reginald Maudling, a Conservative Home Secretary, and now Jenkins has rejected Raft's request to be allowed to visit Britain to promote sale of a Raft biography.

"His presence in the country still would not be conducive to the public good," said a spokesman for the Home Office, which over the years has taken the position that Raft has too-cosy connections in crime circles.

GM boosts prices record 10%

Combined News Services

Labor troubles simmer

DETROIT — General Motors said Friday it is raising prices on its 1975 model cars and trucks nearly 10 per cent, or an average $480, this September. The world's largest automaker said the new prices will reflect an average increase of 2.6 per cent, or $130, for emission-control equipment and an average 7 per cent, or $350, boost in the base price of its vehicles. GM blamed the increase on inflation and three years of rising costs the company could not recover under price controls, which were lifted from the industry last December. The increase is the single largest introductory price hike ever implemented by the firm. It compares with an average $73 increase GM put through on its 1974 models at introduction last September — when price controls were in effect — and $461 in additional price hikes implemented during the model year.

The previous record introductory price increase was an industry average of $206 per vehicle, put through by Detroit's automakers in the fall of 1970. Ford Motor Co. has said prices on its 1975 model cars and trucks will go up an average 8 per cent, or $418. Chrysler Corp. has not said how much it will increase the price of its new models when they go on sale in late September, but company officials have said the hikes will be "substantial."

AF pregnancy policy hit

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Nellie Cearfoss, 19, said Friday she was considering going to court to determine whether it was legal for the Air Force to discharge her because she was pregnant and unmarried. Miss Cearfoss of Beaver Falls, Pa., said she believed she could rear a child and still perform her Air Force duties. She enlisted five months ago and had reached the rank of Airman E-2 when she was honorably discharged on Aug. 1. She said her discharge took 90 minutes while the normal time is two weeks.

Lull in Reds' Da Nang offensive

DA NANG — Fighting eased around Da Nang Friday and field commanders said they were awaiting possible new orders in the wake of President Nixon's resignation, while in Saigon President Nguyen Van Thieu ordered the nation on full military alert. The field commanders said Communist forces who have been waging an offensive in the Da Nang area also appeared to be confused by the new political situation and were waiting new orders. "We're still shooting at each other," said one officer Friday, "but it's a standing-in-place kind of fighting. No one is pushing." Thieu placed the nation on military alert after he listened to a live radio broadcast of Nixon's resignation speech.

India seeks Soviet wheat

NEW DELHI — India is negotiating to buy an additional two million tons of wheat from the Soviet Union to help meet an expected six-million-ton grain shortage this year, a food ministry source said Friday. Indian financial journals have estimated the nation needs to import six million tons of wheat this year to meet an expected shortage. The Soviet Union last October agreed to loan India two million tons of wheat and so far has delivered 1.8 million tons. The present negotiations are for another two million tons. Since April, India also has purchased 1.8 million tons of wheat from other nations, mostly from the U.S.

Connally pleads innocent to milk bribe

WASHINGTON — Former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally Jr. pleaded innocent Friday to all charges rising out of an allegation he accepted a $10,000 bribe to persuade the Nixon administration to raise milk price supports in 1971.

"If there is any doubt, I plead not guilty to all counts," Connally said in a firm voice after Watergate prosecutor Frank Tuerkheimer asked whether the former Texas governor had yet entered a plea.

Chief U.S. District Judge George Hart Jr. granted a request by Edward Bennett Williams,

JOHN CONNALLY

Connally's lawyer, for 45 days in which to file motions. Hart also agreed not to set a trial date until after the motions are filed.

Connally, wearing a blue-gray suit, tapped his fingers nervously on the table before the brief arraignment began. Afterward, he walked briskly out of the courtroom hand-in-hand with his wife, Nellie. To all questions he replied, "No, I won't have anything to say."

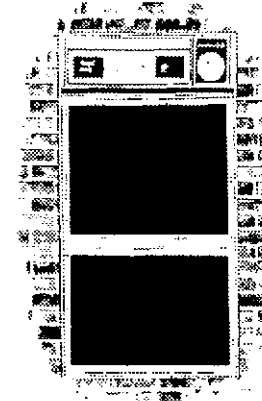

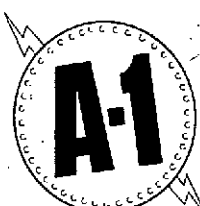

Connally faces a possible maximum penalty of 19 years in prison and $10,000 fine for the five counts of accepting a bribe, conspiracy and lying.

The Watergate Special

Prosecution Force has obtained at least three key witnesses — the source of the cash and two middlemen — for use in its case against Connally.

Jake Jacobsen, former lawyer for the Associated Milk Producers Inc., pleaded guilty Wednesday to one count of paying a bribe to Connally. Jacobsen confessed he made two $5,000 payments in 1971 to Connally, his long-time Texas associate.

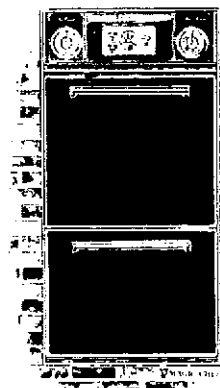

One week earlier, Harold S. Nelson, former AMPI general manager, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to make an illegal payment to a public official.

Southland carpenters' strike ends with 3-year 40% raise

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Members of the Carpenters Union ended their 40-day strike against Southern California's construction industry Friday by approving a new contract that will boost their combined wages and fringe benefits by 40 per cent over a three-year period.

The carpenters are expected to return to work Monday — following by more than a week the return of the striking laborers and cement masons.

Under the terms of the new pact, which was approved by the contractors last week, the average Southland carpenter will make $108 a day in combined wages and benefits by 1976.

Assuming that 70 per cent of the total goes to straight wages — as it does now — the carpenter's actual daily pay will come to $75, or nearly $20 more than it is today.

Carpenters in 11 Southland counties voted on the pact all day Thursday. Friday, union spokesman Sal Perrotta announced that 5,590 carpenters had voted in favor of the agreement, 3,958 against it.

THE AGREEMENT calls for restoration of a 30-cent-an-hour pay boost that had been denied the carpenters last year by a federal pay board. The 30 cents will be retroactive to last May 1.

In addition, the carpenters will have another dollar added to their pay checks as of July 1, making their straight pay $8.40 an hour.

Thereafter, there will be periodic increases, but whether they go into benefits or wages will be decided by the union when the increases become effective.

All in all, the carpenters will get an extra $4.05 an hour over the life of the contract. By 1976, their combined wages and benefits — now $9.46 an hour — will total $13.51.

The carpenters' vote ended what may have been the bitterest and most significant strike in the memory of Southland construction people. For, aside from economic losses, which ran into the millions, the strike caused many contractors to reexamine their traditional relationship with the construction trades.

A good number of contractors are now convinced that, given the cost of union wage scales and work rules, they have little choice but to go non-union in order to meet the growing competition of open shop contractors in the state.

If the non-union trend picks up momentum, it's certain that the construction people will say that the 1974 strike and its hefty wage increases were a triggering factor in the development.

THE STRIKE also caused a serious rift in the building trades. The Operating Engineers Union, which had settled for a "noninflationary" wage and benefit increase of 18 per cent over three years, bitterly criticized the carpenters for making what it said were excessive demands on the industry, and also warned of the trend toward open shop construction in the state.

For a time, in fact, many engineers — and some teamsters — crossed the picket lines of the striking unions (the carpenters, cement masons and laborers.)

An effort has since been made to heal the rift, but the hard feelings caused by the split are not likely to pass easily or quickly.

Carpenters Union officials, for their part, said they were only seeking what their members and their families needed to live on in the face of heavy inflation, which had pushed the cost of living up 10 per cent alone in the last year.

For about three weeks, the Southern California walkout coincided with construction strikes in Northern California and San Diego County and brought heavy construction to a virtual standstill throughout the state.

The San Diego and Northern California disputes have since been settled; now, with the Southern California strike over, heavy construction in the state is expected to return to normal within the next few days.

GRAFFITI

THE MOST DIFFICULT YEARS OF MARRIAGE ARE THOSE FOLLOWING THE WEDDING

For seven years, we have been trying to get the city to make some street improvements in our neighborhood, the 300 block of 49th Street. The road has such a high crown that it's impossible to back a car out of a driveway without the bottom scraping the street. Also, the curbs are so high that a person can't get out of the passenger side of a parked car. We received a letter from the city stating that funds had been approved to study the area and my husband was shown some of the city engineer's recommendations for reconstructing the street, but so far nothing has been done.

Can ACTION LINE find out if the city plans to do anything about our street? M.M., Long Beach.

It appears that a major reconstruction job won't be undertaken there, but the city at least plans to lower the crown somewhat, according to City Engineer Tom G. Marchese. The work should be completed by the first part of next year, he added. Marchese said the street originally was constructed with a high crown and curbs to facilitate drainage. The city's study of the area concluded that the installation of storm drains would be required to correct the situation. "And the city decided that's just too expensive a project for a localized problem," he said. But the lowering of the crown should make it easier for the residents to back their cars out of their driveways, he added.

My son saved his money and on April 15 I helped him order an Exploration Set from Strek Enterprises in Detroit, Mich. My canceled check came back but he didn't get his package. I wrote to the company about a month ago but got no answer. Please help my son, Tyrone, get his package that he waits for every day. A.J., Compton.

He should have his package soon. David Lillard, manager of the mail-order firm, told ACTION LINE he was supposed to get the sets from the manufacturer in early June but the arrived a month late and he has been sending out the hundreds of delayed orders as fast as he could.

Long wait

The residents of San Pedro need a bus terminal or at least some sort of a shelter where they can wait for the bus. Seven buses lay over at Sixth Street and Sampson Way, but we have only a few benches there. This is fine during good weather, but when it rains, it's unsatisfactory and the benches usually can't be used in the morning because of the dew. There are many others who feel the same way. Whom could we contact concerning this need? A.P., Terminal Island.

The Southern California Rapid Transit District currently has no plans to build any additional terminals or shelters, but, according to an RTD spokesman, such a proposal would be considered by the district's new services review board if you file a request in writing with the board at 1060 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Calif. 90015. Your suggestion might stand a better chance if you submit a petition signed by several other residents and you also should send a copy to your councilman, John S. Gibson Jr., 200 N. Spring St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012. A spokesman for the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce said there has been some talk of building a park in that area and some sort of a bus shelter might be included if this proposal is approved. But there apparently has been no campaign on the part of civic leaders to get a bus terminal in San Pedro.

SOUND OFF!

Long Beach offers a beautiful pier, Belmont, with free parking facilities. It's a fun place for fishermen and their families to use free of charge. However, the users of these facilities should be made aware, as they obviously are not, of the two large apartment houses facing the parking lot. The people are completely oblivious that these are homes to quite a number of us and that the loud noises, drag racing, motor cycles, screeching of brakes and overnight parkers rob us nearby apartment residents of many hours of sleep. To add to the above, we are serenaded all night by Jack in the Box with "May I have your order please?" We recognize that we live in a recreational area and, during the day, I find the many happy sounds most pleasant. But if persons using this area would only make some efforts to help abate this cacophony at night, there would be at least 60 families in our complex who might at long last get a good night's sleep. Mrs. L.F., Long Beach.

Slain singer's kin sue for $720,000

The parents of a Belmont Shore restaurant singer have filed a $720,000 wrongful death suit in her shooting, naming as defendants the Cuban dishwasher who shot her, the restaurant corporation and four of the firm's principals.

The suit, filed by Ismael and Pura Fierro Huerta, alleges that negligence led to the shooting of their 19-year-old daughter, Maria Elena, last Nov. 14 in Baca's Mexican Restaurant, 5430 E. Second St.

The action names 36-year-old dishwasher Luis Guido Roberto Casanova, Arthur Baca, Margaret S. and Robert H. Oliver, Roy Beaman and Margo-Rob, Inc., the restaurant corporation.

Casanova, who friends said had been jilted by Miss Huerta shortly before the shooting, was sentenced June 25 to one year in County Jail on his conviction of voluntary manslaughter.

He was originally charged with murder in the case after more than 20 startled patrons saw him shoot. Miss Huerta once in the chest with a revolver police later learned came from the restaurant's office safe.

THE CHARGE, however, was reduced after psychiatric testing showed the defendant to have a diminished capacity for forming the necessary criminal intent to commit murder.

The wrongful death suit, filed Thursday in Long Beach Superior Court, alleges negligence on the part of the restaurant and its personnel for having kept a revolver where Casanova "was enabled to gain access" to such a weapon.

The plaintiffs said the shooting deprived them of "comfort, protection, services, inheritance rights and support" from their daughter.

Attorney Morris Schechter prepared the civil action, which seeks general damages plus claims for funeral and other expenses.

Small claims defendant found guilty of perjury

A Long Beach Superior Court jury Friday convicted Bobby J. Jones of perjury for falsely insisting in a Municipal Court small claims case that he was a different "Jones" with the middle name of Lee.

The verdict against the defendant, who is 30 and lives at 2131 Lime Ave., was returned a little more than two hours after the case went to the jury. Judge Pat Mullendore presided at the two-day trial.

Witnesses included Judge W.H. Winston Jr. of Municipal Court. It was Winston who initiated the perjury complaint filed by the district attorney's office after Jones — in a series of appearances in Winston's court — insisted he was not the Jones who signed a promissory note for a loan from Household Finance Corp.

Jones was the defendant against the corporation's small claims action to collect $463.93, a sum which Winston eventually awarded to HFC, along with $10.10 court costs.

Mullendore set probation and sentence hearing for Sept. 12. Jones is free on his own recognizance.

Reagan vetoes low-interest housing loans

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Reagan said Friday he has vetoed bills to create a state corporation to underwrite low-interest housing loans for middle and lower income Californians.

One bill would have created the 13-member California Housing Finance Corp.

The other would have put a $500 million bond issue on the Nov. 5 ballot to finance the corporation and its loans.

Reagan said he realized the need for increased availability of housing "but this bill has serious defects and would substantially alter the state's fiscal policies."

The means by which the proposed corporation would be financed would jeopardize the state's high bond rating and require the state to pay higher interest rates on the bonds it sells, the Republican governor contended.

Reagan also said he thought only a "tiny percentage of the loans" would go to those who need them most and that the new agency would be too independent of the legislative and executive branches of government.

The governor's office announced his decision the day after the Thursday deadline for him to either sign the bill, veto it or have it become law without his signature.

Both measures were sponsored by Sen. George Zenovich, D-Fresno.

Zenovich had urged the governor to let the voters decide the issue.

In a letter to Reagan, Zenovich said:

"YOUR OWN State Department of Housing and Community Development tells us that 800,000 moderate-income households and 1.8 million low-income households need assistance to achieve decent, safe and sanitary housing conditions."

"Given that 37 per cent of all California households need assistance, I believe a California Housing Finance Corp. is urgently needed and that the people of California have an undeniable right to vote on such a program."

Zenovich pointed out that the bills had passed each house by a margin of more than two-thirds. It takes a two-thirds vote in both the Assembly and Senate to override a gubernatorial veto.

Zenovich estimated that home loans would have been available at about 6 per cent interest through the corporation, compared with the going rate of 10 per cent or more on the open money market.

IOWA FARMER Keith Bruce, right, and son, David, stand in their field of dry, parched corn they have chopped down for cattle feed. Corn crops in most drought-stricken states are nearly lost.

Rain drenches Midwest to end ruinous drought

United Press International

The nation's breadbasket was drenched with rain Friday, breaking a drought that has caused crop losses running into the billions of dollars.

"The dry spell for this area is over," Fred Ostby of the National Weather Service said. "It looks like there are more opportunities for showers and thunderstorms through the plains down into Texas. There's now a lot of moisture available, and it looks good for additional rains."

Government and state officials, farmers and ranchers assessed the situation, hoping that the moisture had come in time to salvage at least half the soybean and grain sorghum crops.

Most of the drought-stricken states, including Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, North and South Dakota, Texas, Nebraska and Ohio, have conceded that corn crops were about lost.

"The rain should help the pastures and it could give the beans a boost but as far as the corn in the drought area, it is already damaged," said Robert Watson of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service for Iowa.

The drought, which some experts called the worst since the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s, already has caused crop losses of more than $10 billion.

A survey of 12 Midwest states indicated that all suffered from the drought.

Reports from state farm bureau presidents showed that yield production range from average in Wisconsin to a 50 per cent reduction in Nebraska. Several states also reported serious financial problems for young farmers and others who suffered heavy livestock losses and are now experiencing dry conditions resulting in little or no crops.

Some states, including Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma, have asked for emergency assistance from the government. The first such assistance was issued earlier this week to two counties in South Dakota.

Cal. Legislature wires best wishes to Ford

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Senate Friday sent "best wishes" to the nation's new president, Gerald R. Ford.

The body unanimously passed a concurrent resolution extending congratulations to Ford for "his success in his endeavors to advance the interests of our country, both here and abroad."

The resolution pointed out that the task of the new President "requires the help of all the people of our country."

"The best wishes of the members of the Legislature of the state of California go to the new President as he assumes his new responsibilities," the resolution said.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to President Ford.

Reinecke takes Reagan's place over the weekend

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke will get two more brief tours as acting governor of California this weekend, but a Reinecke aide says the lieutenant governor has no plans to take any official action.

Both Reinecke, who was convicted two weeks ago of perjury, and Gov. Reagan say they are taking precautions to see that Reinecke doesn't have to do anything as chief executive.

Reagan's criticism to allow Reinecke to be acting governor again has been criticized by foes because of the legal shadow which Reinecke's conviction casts over every official action he may take.

The lieutenant governor automatically becomes acting governor when the governor leaves the state.

Reagan plans to leave California for about an hour Saturday night to deliver a speech at Harrah's hotel and casino, a few yards across the state line at Stateline, Nev.

He plans to be out of California 3 to 4 hours Sunday for a noontime political speech in Seattle.

A Reinecke aide, Earl Parker, said the lieutenant governor will probably be at his ranch near Placerville the entire weekend and has no plans to go to the Capitol or make any public appearance during the two brief stints as lieutenant governor.

Reinecke possesses all authority of governor when Reagan is out of state, including command of the National Guard and authority to sign or veto legislation and make appointments.

But Parker said Reinecke would be in close touch with Reagan in case anything happens, and would wait for Reagan to return to avoid taking any action which might later be challenged in court because of his conviction. Reagan spokesmen confirmed the arrangements and agreement.

Continuing to proclaim he is "absolutely not guilty" of lying in 1972 to a U.S. Senate committee, Reinecke has resisted all pressures to resign prior to his sentencing, which is now scheduled Aug. 30.

Meanwhile in Washington, lawyers for Reinecke charged Friday that he was found guilty of perjury because of improper conduct by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker. The charges against Parker were made in a motion that Reinecke's conviction of perjury be reversed or that he be given a new trial.

The Republican state official was found guilty of having lied when he told the Senate Judiciary Committee that he had not told former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell of an offer by ITT to help finance the 1972 GOP convention prior to settlement of an anti-trust suit against the company.

In addition to accusing Parker of improper conduct, Reinecke's motion for acquittal said the Senate committee should have turned over materials sought by his lawyers to help establish his innocence.

The motion cited the July 24 ruling of the Supreme Court that required former President Richard

M. Nixon to turn over subpoenaed tapes to the U.S. District Court. Under that ruling, Reinecke's lawyers said, the Senate panel was bound to turn over subpoenaed materials at least for examination by the judge in his chambers.

In criticizing Parker, Reinecke's lawyers said the improper actions had included the judge's "chastising" the defendant's lawyer, James F. Cox, in the presence of the jury.

Parker also was accused of "improper interruption" of Cox and of having sustained government objections to the lawyer's questioning of witnesses. The judge further was said to have made "comments suggestive of the court's approval or disbelief of certain witnesses."

"The result of this conduct was to indicate to the jury the judge's opinions about various witnesses and of defense counsel and defendant himself and thereby unduly and improperly to influence the jury's deliberations," Reinecke's lawyers said. "As a result of this conduct, a verdict of guilty was returned."

Cal. Senate passes pension reform bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A sweeping reform bill intended to regulate private pension funds in California passed the State Senate Friday on a 23-11 vote in spite of opposition from both big business and big labor.

Sen. George Deukmejian said his bill would guarantee rights of workers in an area in which there currently are "no regulations, no guarantee that participants in the plans will receive their pensions as promised, and no one to turn to" if benefits are cut or denied.

"There are a lot of good friends of ours who have voiced opposition, and most of it is based on the idea they would rather have federal legislation," the Long Beach Republican said.

Deukmejian said he also would prefer federal legislation, and that he expects there may be some enacted this year.

HE ASKED for passage of his bill to allow Assembly hearings to go ahead so that California may enact a law in case the pension law now pending in Congress fails.

And if Congress does act, Deukmejian said: "It will not preempt the field of disclosure. It will not preempt the field of enforcement. We will still need state law."

He said his bill could be modified to fill in areas that aren't covered by federal law if Congress acts before the end of this month.

Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco, complained Deukmejian was pushing a bill which neither side — either business or labor — wants.

"The leaders of organizations are not always representative of the interests of their members. Sometimes the interests of leadership and members do not coincide," he said.

Deukmejian said the California Manufacturers Association, the California State Chamber of Commerce, the AFL-CIO and Teamsters Union all oppose his bill.

Governor's pay up

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's next governor would earn $60,000 a year under legislation sent to the Assembly Friday on a 27-9 Senate vote.

The governor's salary is now $49,100 per year.

Demos widen lead for House in poll

Associated Press

Democrats have moved to a commanding 55 to 29 per cent lead in voter preference for the House of Representatives this November, according to a Harris survey of 1,214 likely voters.

Pollster Louis Harris said the results of the survey taken between July 16 and 22 show the widest lead ever recorded in his poll during an off-year election.

In May, he said, the Democratic lead was 49 to 30 per cent. The Democrats have recorded their chief gains since then in the East and Midwest, he said.

If the present margins were maintained until the election, they would cause the heaviest Republican losses in Congress since the mid-1930s, he said.

Harris said, however, that if the Watergate issue were defused, "the public's attitude toward the issues and the outcome of the off-year elections could change considerably."

The Democrats came out ahead of the Republicans when the survey participants were asked which party they believed would do a better job on a series of nine political and economic issues.

The Democrats were well ahead on all the economic issues and slightly ahead on working for world peace. Nearly half of those polled expressed doubt that either party would be better in "preventing future Watergate scandals from taking place."

Ehrlichman seeks cover-up trial delay

By JANE DENISON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John D. Ehrlichman, already once-convicted and facing more criminal charges, asked Friday that next month's Watergate cover-up trial be delayed or moved from Washington because of "inflammatory" developments.

He cited the "virtual toppling of a presidential administration" by Watergate.

His plea was filed in federal court within hours after President Nixon, whom he once served as chief domestic affairs adviser, resigned to face an uncertain future as a private citizen that may even include his own indictment in the case.

Six former Nixon aides, including Ehrlichman, are scheduled to go on trial Sept. 9, accused of conspiracy to hush up the bugging scandal. The same grand jury that indicted them in March named Nixon an unindicted coconspirator after they were advised an incumbent president could not be indicted.

To go ahead with the trial as planned, Ehrlichman's lawyers said in a legal brief, "would be to substitute a trial in the press for a fair and impartial trial."

"As a result," they said, "the trial should be continued (delayed) for such time as is necessary to allow the inflammatory atmosphere surrounding this case to be cooled."

They also asked that Ehrlichman be tried separately from his co-defendants, contending that "massive and pervasive" publicity of recent weeks, particularly the House Judiciary Committee debate on impeachment, have caused potential jurors to believe his trial a mere formality to confirm Ehrlichman's guilt "already disseminated in the media."

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The State Supreme Court Friday ordered former presidential assistant John Ehrlichman suspended from practicing law.

He was suspended from his co-defendants, contending that "massive and pervasive" publicity of recent weeks, particularly the House Judiciary Committee debate on impeachment, have caused potential jurors to believe his trial a mere formality to confirm Ehrlichman's guilt "already disseminated in the media."

Ehrlichman was convicted last month of conspiracy and perjury in the 1971 raid on Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office and has been sentenced to from 20 months to 5 years in prison. He is free pending appeal.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, who is handling the case, has already denied earlier defense motions to delay or move the trial.

Prospects held better for U.S. health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's resignation improves the chance of national health insurance being passed this year, Caspar Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said Friday.

Addressing 700 employees in the ILEW auditorium and tens of thousands of others across the country through telephone hookup, Weinberger said President Gerald Ford had asked everyone in the department to stay on the job.

"As far as I know, we'll all still be here," the secretary said.

As a result of Nixon's resignation, Weinberger said, "we have an even better chance of the possibility of national health insurance this year."

The House Ways and Means Committee, after several weeks of hearings on competing health insurance bills, has begun drafting its own legislation. The Senate Finance Committee suspended its hearings earlier in the summer and, anticipating a Senate impeachment trial, veteran congressional observers had seen little chance for the passage of legislation this year.

Gurney files second bid for case dismissal

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., filed a second motion Friday asking dismissal of an indictment charging him with conspiracy, bribery and perjury.

Gurney, the first senator in 50 years to be indicted while in office, contends the indictment is vague and ambiguous and fails to allege an offense against the United States.

ACLU will press impeachment

By GARY LIBMAN
Associated Press

The American Civil Liberties Union said Friday it will continue its national drive to impeach Richard Nixon, calling it the only way to show the full extent of his administration's wrongdoings and to restore confidence in government.

"We are not necessarily looking to put Richard Nixon in jail. I personally would have no objection to President Ford pardoning him after a trial. But I do want to establish that what he did was illegal so that people won't think he was unjustly driven from office," said Marvin Schachter, president of the Southern California Chapter of the ACLU, in Los Angeles.

Schachter noted that the impeachment articles passed by the House Judiciary Committee contain allegations of illegal use of the FBI, CIA and the Internal Revenue Service.

He said these and other allegations raised in the articles are not actionable in a court of law and that a court would accept only evidence relevant to an alleged offense.

"If there is an impeachment trial then they are brought up before the American people and the President must defend himself," Schachter said.

"No one pretends the full evidence in the files of President Nixon are available to either Congress or the American people. We still really do not know the full extent of the activities of the Nixon administration. That's really the heart of our position. Every time a new tape comes out we learn something new."

Schachter said there is precedent for an impeachment trial after an official leaves office. In 1876, he said, the Senate tried a former secretary of war after ruling that resignation did not bar further impeachment proceedings.

BACK HOME in Wellesley, Mass., for a greeting from the family dog is James D. St. Clair, former Watergate lawyer for Richard M. Nixon. He said he does not believe Congress has authority to grant immunity to ex-president.

Ex-president may lay claim to recordings

By MARGARET GENTRY
WASHINGTON (AP) — As Richard M. Nixon's lawyers disclosed Friday that 17 minutes are missing from a subpoenaed Watergate tape, a spokesman for White House lawyers said the former president may have a legal claim to those controversial recordings.

Larry Speaks, the spokesman for the White House lawyers, said the recordings of presidential conversations remain under Secret Service guard in a locked vault. He said that to his knowledge none of the Watergate material was taken by Nixon when he flew to California on Friday to begin life as a private citizen.

Jerald F. ForHurst, press secretary for President Ford, said Nixon had not signed a pardon "or any form of immunity for himself before he left office." ForHurst said the Ford administration will not use a taping system to record White House conversations.

"The revelation that 17 minutes were missing from a taped conversation between Nixon and former White House special counsel Charles W. Colson was made Friday when Nixon's lawyers appeared in U.S. District Court in San Francisco to seek a ruling on a subpoena for the 64 taped conversations subpoenaed by special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, James D. St. Clair said. The gap occurred when a tape reel ran out during a Nixon-Colson conversation on March 21, 1973. The conversation occurred the same day John W. Dean III warned Nixon that Watergate had become a cancer threatening the presidency.

St. Clair, who was Nixon's special Watergate counsel, did not appear in court Friday. He flew to Boston for a weekend after announcing that his service to Nixon had ended when the Nixon presidency ended. However, ForHurst said St. Clair would remain at the White House and retain his title of special counsel to the President.

Speaks said Friday that the ultimate ownership of the White House tapes and other Watergate material remains in doubt and could become increasingly important as prosecutions of former Nixon lieutenants proceed.

"The question of whether they're in the custody of the former president, or the White House, we don't know," Speaks said. At the Justice Department, spokesman John W. Hushen said the issue is unclear because of a Supreme Court order upholding Jaworski's subpoena. "In the past," Hushen said, "presidential papers, which would include sound recordings, are the custody of the outgoing president."

The tapes of the 64 conversations have been turned over to Judge John J. Sirica for his private inspection to determine what portions should be delivered to Jaworski.

White House attorney John Chester delivered to Sirica on Friday papers that disclosed the 17 missing minutes. In response to reporters' questions about Nixon's future legal representation, Chester said, "I would assume that when Mr. Nixon becomes a private citizen ... he will have his own lawyers."

Chester also surrendered another tape which Nixon's lawyers said earlier they had been unable to find. It covers conversations Nixon had with Colson on Jan. 5 and Jan. 8, 1973. Chester said the latter conversation complies with the subpoena for a late January talk about Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr.

Chester promised that the search will continue for another conversation required by the subpoena but not yet located. That is a Feb. 20, 1973, meeting in which Nixon and H.R. Haldeman discussed Job S. Magruder, who has confessed to conspiracy to obstruct justice.

The analysis outlined Nixon's assertions that some parts of tapes surrendered to Sirica should be withheld from Jaworski on grounds of executive privilege. The privilege claim was urged for portions of conversations which St. Clair said have no bearing on Watergate.

The tapes have been surrendered to Sirica in compliance with a Supreme Court order upholding Jaworski's subpoena for the recordings of 64 conversations for use in the Watergate cover-up trial scheduled to begin next month.

The subpoena also calls for Nixon's notes relating to those conversations. Those have not yet been supplied, but Chester promised that Sirica would be advised by Monday about the progress of the search.

TOP FORD PROBLEM

handed to secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

After repeating the oath, Ford kissed his wife, smiled tightly and offered "an unprecedented contact with my countrymen."

The new President stepped to the rostrum and, with simple but moving eloquence, addressed the American people with "just a little straight talk among friends."

"I believe that truth is the glue that holds the government together, and not only government but civilization itself," he said soberly. "That bond, though strained, is unbroken at home and abroad. In all my public and private acts as your President, I expect to follow my instincts of openness and candor with full confidence that honesty is always the best policy in the end."

He promised a continuing quest for peace. He noted that he was not elected president and asked the American people "to confirm me as your president with your prayers."

Ford's voice broke for an instant as he spoke of Nixon, forced to resignation by the Watergate scandals:

"May our former president, who brought peace to millions, find it for himself."

The new President spoke of the scandals that have wracked the government:

"As we bind up the internal wounds of Watergate, more painful and more poisonous than those of foreign wars, let us restore the golden rule to our political process, and let brotherly love purge our hearts of suspicion and hate."

"... My fellow Americans, our long national nightmare is over," said Ford.

Ford promised to "follow my instincts of openness and candor with full confidence that honesty is always the best policy in the end..."

"God helping me, I will not let you down," he concluded.

In the same room, barely two hours earlier, Nixon took tearful leave of his Cabinet and key aides, telling them that greatness comes in times of trouble, not triumph, and that defeat can be a beginning, not an end.

The economic advisors with whom Ford met Friday included Simon, Stein, Greenspan, counselor Kenneth Rush, Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board and Budget Director Roy L. Ash.

Also at the meeting were Ford aides Robert T. Hartmann and William Siedman. Former Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania, described as an adviser to Ford on transition and organization problems, was also there.

The press spokesman said Ford "underlined to the participants his determination and resolve to attempt a solution of our economic problems and controlling the problem of inflation as a high and first priority of the Ford administration."

White House sources say Ford will consult many more persons than did Nixon in drawing up his economic policy and also will work much closer with the Congress.

But they say Ford will follow the recent Nixon administration policies of a slowdown in government spending and support for tight control over growth of money and credit.

Ford told congressional leaders after his swearing-in speech that he would send them his vice presidential nomination by Aug. 21, a source said. That is the day before Congress begins a summer recess.

Before he was sworn in, Ford pledged he would undertake a quick, thorough and responsible search for a vice president.

Only three members of the top Nixon staff had left as of Friday, Ronald L. Ziegler, the former press secretary; Rose Mary Woods, who had been presidential secretary, and Stephen Bull, the former appointments secretary.

A four-man team was assembled to counsel Ford on the reconstruction of the White House staff. Those advisers are Scranton, NATO Ambassador Donald M. Rumsfeld, Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, and former Virginia Rep. John O. Marsh Jr. All had served with Ford in the House.

Hartmann, chief of Ford's vice presidential staff, will become a counselor to the new President.

Alexander M. Haig, Nixon's chief of staff, had told Ford that top aides to the resigned president would remain on the job "in our hour of common cause."

PRESIDENTIAL KISS for First Lady Betty Ford follows swearing-in by Chief Justice Warren Burger, right, in East Room of White House.

Text of Ford's inaugural talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following is the text of President Ford's address following his swearing-in Friday:

Mr. Chief Justice, my dear friends, my fellow Americans:

The oath I have taken is the same oath that was taken by George Washington and by every president under the Constitution. But I assume the presidency under extraordinary circumstances, never before experienced by Americans. This is an hour of history that troubles our minds and hurts our hearts.

Therefore, I feel it is my first duty to make an unprecedented compact with my countrymen. Not an inaugural speech, not a fireside chat, not a campaign speech. Just a little straight talk among friends. And I intend it to be the first of many.

I am acutely aware that you have not elected me as your President by your ballots. So I ask you to confirm me as your President with your prayers. And I hope that such prayers will also be the first of many.

If you have not chosen me by secret ballot, neither have I gained office by any secret promises. I have not campaigned either for the presidency or the vice presidency. I have not subscribed to any partisan platform. I am indebted to no men and only to one woman — my dear wife — as I begin this very difficult job.

I have not sought this enormous responsibility, but I will not shirk it. Those who nominated and confirmed me as vice president were my friends and are my friends. They were of both parties, elected by all the people, and acting under the Constitution in their name. It is only fitting, then, that I should pledge to them and to you that I will be the President of all the people.

Thomas Jefferson said the people are the only sure reliance for the preservation of our liberty. And down the years Abraham Lincoln renewed this American article of faith, asking: "Is there any better way or equal hope in the world?"

I intend, on next Monday, to request of the speaker of the House of Representatives and the president pro tempore of the Senate the privilege of appearing before the Congress to share with my former colleagues and with you, the American people, my views on the priority business of the nation, and to solicit your views and their views. And may I say to the speaker and the others if I could meet with you right after this, these remarks, I would appreciate it.

Even though this is late in an election year, there is no way we can go forward except together, and no way anybody can win except by serving the people's urgent needs. We cannot stand still or slip backwards. We must go forward, now, together.

To the peoples and the governments of all friendly nations, and I hope that could encompass the whole world, I pledge an uninterrupted and sincere search for peace. America will remain strong and united, but its strength will remain dedicated to the safety and sanity of the entire family of man as well as to our own precious freedom.

I believe that truth is the glue that holds government together, not only our government, but civilization itself. That bond, though strained, is unbroken at home and abroad. In all my public and private acts as your President, I expect to follow my instincts of openness and candor with full confidence that honesty is always the best policy in the end.

My fellow Americans, our long national nightmare is over.

Our Constitution works; our great republic is a government of laws and not of men. Here the people rule. But there is a higher power, by whatever name we honor Him, who ordains not only righteousness but love, not only justice but mercy.

As we bind up the internal wounds of Watergate, more painful and more poisonous than those of foreign wars, let us restore the Golden Rule to our political process, and let brotherly love purge our hearts of suspicion and of hate.

In the beginning I asked you to pray for me. Before closing I again ask your prayers for Richard Nixon and for his family.

May our former President, who brought peace to millions, find it for himself. May God bless and comfort his wonderful wife and daughters, whose love and loyalty will forever be a shining legacy to all who bear the lonely burdens of the White House.

I can only guess at those burdens, although I have witnessed at close hand the tragedies that befell three Presidents and the lesser trials of others.

With all the strength and all the good sense I have gained from life, with all the confidence my family and friends and dedicated staff impart to me, and with the goodwill of the countless Americans I have encountered in recent visits to 40 states, I now solemnly reaffirm my promise I made to you last Dec. 6: to uphold the Constitution, to do what is right as God gives me to see the right, and to do the very best I can for America.

God helping me, I will not let you down. Thank you.

Economic miracles may take Ford a little while

By SOMA GOLDEN
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For President Ford the first 100 days will be no picnic.

The economic miracles that the public seems to expect from the new chief executive, on the problems of inflation, recession, and unemployment, will be difficult, if not impossible, to achieve.

"He has inherited a disaster," said one sympathetic economist Friday in the wake of Ford's ascendancy. With wholesale prices rocketing at more than a 50 percent compounded annual rate and the jobless rate starting to move up on the charts, Ford is faced with bigger economic problems than was his predecessor.

Almost any Republican adviser he picks will tell the new David that to slay Goliath will require a long period of slow growth and rising unemployment — a gloomy gospel for any politician.

One of Ford's favorite economists, Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, thinks it will take at least two years of poky growth to squeeze inflation down to more acceptable levels. Other analysts—especially in the conservative ranks of the economics profession—think it might take longer. That kind of advice could put the new President right in the middle of election year 1976 with considerable problems on the economic front.

FORD IS not a man without options, but they are tough options politically and risky options economically. He cannot undo the damage that the drought has wrought on the Midwest. Nor can he be sure that the Arabs or some other commodity cartel won't upset the international money markets or upend the domestic price indexes.

But in the cooperative spirit of '74 that is expected to descend on the new White House, here is where the President's choices lie:

On wage and price policy, Ford, a staunch conservative, is rumored to be an opponent of wage-price controls. That is not quite true.

The new President did not like the rigid, formal controls of phases I to IV, which involved mountains of paper work for labor, business and government.

But, as Ford told a New York business audience last May, he is also opposed to "abuses" on the wage-price front. He favored the refusal of Congress to pass any controls legislation to follow up Richard M. Nixon's disappointing program.

But, said the then vice-president: "I hope...that business and labor...don't take advantage of the current situation."

SUCH HOPES now may be dashed on the rocks of July's disappointing wholesale price index and the second quarter's double-digit wage increases.

Ford could move in several directions. The simplest action would be for him to "jawbone" down oversized wage or price increases. Or he could return to the long-abandoned Democratic policy—either by a change in taxes or by a cut in federal spending. The Republicans, including Ford, seem to prefer the latter route.

Here is where the new President may show more skill and more success than his predecessor. Unlike Nixon, who had an almost hostile relationship with Congress in recent years, Ford, a 25-year veteran of the House of Representatives, enjoys close ties with the Hill.

Though labor might not take any such medicine without a fight, business could prove cooperative—especially if the economy remains sluggish and demand for industrial goods tapers off.

Said one New York economist: "I think what Ford does on controls could be mostly show biz. But he'll be able to call it a victory. Industrial prices have gone up like mad since Nixon's controls went off. List prices now are so high that business can pause a while to cooperate with the new President."

One of the few beliefs with almost total acceptance among economists these days is the idea that monetary policy has been overused as a crude tool to cut back demand. What is needed, most agree, is a move to restrain demand on the fiscal side of policy—either by a change in taxes or by a cut in federal spending. The Republicans, including Ford, seem to prefer the latter route.

Here is where the new President may show more skill and more success than his predecessor. Unlike Nixon, who had an almost hostile relationship with Congress in recent years, Ford, a 25-year veteran of the House of Representatives, enjoys close ties with the Hill.

Galbraith sees inflation No. 1 Ford problem

NEW YORK (AP) — Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith said Friday the biggest problem facing President Ford is the economy.

"His choices are simple. Either he gets the inflation under control or else he'll have the short-term tenure of office since Warren G. Harding," said Galbraith in an interview.

"The American economy takes management, and many of the things that are needed are unpleasant," he said. "Controlling inflation requires across-the-board action which includes controls, taxes, an attack on bottlenecks and public service employment, instead of action by general measures."

Leader's of both parties praise Ford's 1st talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional parties Friday praised President Ford's first address to the nation in such terms as "magnificent" and "superb."

"It will undoubtedly bring the country together," said Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott. "His line about 'openness and candor' should set the tone for all Americans to follow."

"Magnificent," Scott commented.

"It was authentic Jerry Ford," Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said. "It was superb. He hit the right notes."

Calling the speech "very moving, from the heart," Mansfield met with Ford later in the White House and assured him that Democrats would go "more than half way in cooperating" with the new administration.

U.S. policies unchanged, Ford tells 57 envoys

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ambassadors from 57 nations trooped to the White House Friday to be assured by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that U.S. foreign policy remains basically unchanged.

President Ford, sitting in on some of the sessions, declared: "I'll rely on Henry for all the tough international negotiations."

He said he was keeping Kissinger on as head of National Security Council also.

At the State Department, messages went out to all the countries in the world, emphasizing continuity despite Richard M. Nixon's abrupt departure from the presidency.

King Hussein's visit late next week was confirmed, pointing the way toward probable negotiations between Jordan and Israel this fall.

The briefings began with envoys from all the NATO allies except Luxembourg, then proceeded on to Japan, the Soviet Union, 15 Arab states, the People's Republic of China, 24 Latin American nations, Israel and South Vietnam.

Ford's new press secretary Gerald F. terHorst said both the President and Kissinger "underlined the fact that NATO is the central element in our foreign policy."

TerHorst announced that Donald Rumsfeld, the ambassador to NATO, would be temporarily withdrawn to help Ford in his transitional period.

The President spent some time conferring with the Arab ministers. Recalling his 25 years in Congress, he said that "negotiating not only with opponents but with your own party is difficult, too."

He then assured them that Kissinger would direct Middle East negotiations as he did for Nixon. Egypt's Ashraf Ghorbal responded: "Dr. Kissinger has gained the esteem of everyone."

Ford agreed. "The overwhelming majority of people feel the same way," he said.

Following White House custom, a handful of newsmen, photographers and television cameramen were rotated to the Oval Office and the Roosevelt Room but not permitted to stay long enough to hear anything more than amenities.

Ford, after sitting solemnly through his first such session, quipped to the NATO envoys about the press:

"Do you have this problem in your country. They're all fine people, but they get their pound of flesh."

the White House that he wished he could reward them financially for their services.

"I only wish that I were a wealthy man," he said and then, smiling, he added, "At the present time, I've got to find a way to pay my taxes."

Although he no longer has any legal obligation to do so, Nixon has agreed to pay $148,081 in taxes and penalties for the year 1969. He already has paid $284,706 in taxes and penalties for the years 1970-1972.

Ford could move in several directions. The

'Fate detained me,' Ford tells gathering in Watts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just two hours before he was sworn in as the 38th President, Gerald R. Ford helped dedicate a new housing project in the Watts area of Los Angeles. He did it by telephone.

Ford told the new homeowners gathered for the occasion that he had looked forward to meeting them in person.

"But fate had something else in store and—as you know—I was detained in Washington," he said.

Ford said it was "important" that the ceremony go ahead because it symbolized "the outcome of legislative processes responsive to the needs of our people."

He said it represented movement toward the goal of suitable housing for all and the need for renewed commitment to human aspirations.

"I congratulate the owners and regret that I cannot today shake your hands and share in your joy," Ford said in his phone call. "But I am sure you will agree with me that today is not only a time to dedicate your new homes but an occasion on which we can all very humbly rededicate ourselves to our American homeland."

Two hours later, Ford was sworn into office as Richard M. Nixon winged his way toward retirement at his palatial California home some 70 miles from Watts.

Hefty pay hike for Jerry Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gerald R. Ford got more than a promotion Friday. He got a hefty salary increase, too — from $62,500 a year to $200,000 plus a $50,000 expense account.

Last December, when Ford was elevated from House Republican leader to vice president, his salary went from $49,500 to $62,500.

PRESIDENT Ford, right, introduces his press secretary, Jerry TerHorst, at meeting with Washington reporters less than an hour after he was sworn in. —UPI

Ford vows open policy with press

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Less than an hour after being sworn in, President Ford held an impromptu meeting with White House reporters and told them he would conduct an "open and candid" administration with "trust, rapport and friendship" with the press.

Simultaneously, Ford made his first official staff change by naming Jerry TerHorst, the chief of the Detroit News Bureau in Washington, as his press secretary. TerHorst takes the place of Ronald L. Ziegler, who served as former President Nixon's press secretary.

ZIEGLER and Nixon often were at odds with Washington newsmen and Ford's appearance in the press room after taking office was an obvious attempt to restore cordial relations between the President and the media.

"I do look forward to getting to know you again," Ford told the reporters. He said he did not ask for any special favors in coverage, but added "thank you for the kindnesses of the past." Ford joked with the reporters about the possibility of turning the news center back to a swimming pool. The center had been a pool before Nixon became president but then a floor was placed over it.

Ford will govern with gavel, says new aide

DETROIT (AP) — "President Ford will govern the country with a gavel, not a club," newly appointed White House press secretary Jerald F. TerHorst said Friday in his final dispatch from Washington as a reporter for the Detroit News.

"The Ford administration will be an open one, much as the man himself during his years in government, hiding neither his successes nor his warts," wrote TerHorst, until Thursday the newspaper's Washington bureau chief.

"His intention as President is to be more than ever what he promised Congress — to be a 'peacemaker' for the nation and a 'calm communicator' between the White House and Capitol Hill," he said in the story in Friday's editions.

TerHorst said that among the aides Ford wants to retain indefinitely at the White House are Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger and Treasury Secretary William Simon.

TerHorst wrote that it is certain that the new President's choice for vice president will not be a controversial one in Congress.

The former Grand Rapids Press reporter, who covered Ford's first congressional campaign for the paper 25 years ago, said, "Mr. Ford will not usher in a new era of Camelot or the big ranch scene."

"Few will probably acclaim Ford as the brightest intellectual ever to sit behind the desk in the Oval Office, but it may be possible that some will acclaim him as the most decent."

TerHorst concluded of the Ford presidency, "It may be the kind of thing that will cause the Georgetown circuit to sniff with disdain from time to time, but for the rest of the country it will probably be a comfort to know that a Midwesterner of sound mind and sound instincts is at the helm of the nation."

"A man who takes his job seriously, but not himself."

Rockefeller top choice in speculation on V.P.

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller's credentials were debated by Republican senators Friday while President Ford formally began a "thorough and responsible" search for his vice president.

Ford told congressional leaders after his swearing-in speech that he would send them his vice presidential nomination by Aug. 21, a source said. That is the day before Congress begins a summer recess.

BEFORE HE was sworn in, Ford pledged he would undertake a quick, thorough and responsible search for a vice president.

Immediately the name of Rockefeller, the former New York governor, was out front, both favorably and unfavorably.

Aides to Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina said he had talked to a dozen GOP senators about a move to oppose Rockefeller and support Sen. Barry Goldwater. They said Helms had received no opposition in his talks with the unnamed dozen.

But then Hugh Scott, the Senate Republican leader, said Rockefeller "has been my No. 1 choice for just about everything for a long time."

There was no indication that Ford was leaning toward Rockefeller; the only clear sign was that Rockefeller's name is among a dozen or more appearing on a staff list prepared for the new President.

THE ONLY governor being widely discussed was Ronald Reagan of California, but party strategists said his selection would be too much of a red flag to Republican moderates whose support Ford will be seeking. At least two other Republican governors have been mentioned as possibilities in the past—Robert Ray of Iowa and Daniel J. Evans of Washington.

But what began as a move by Southern Republican conservatives early Friday against Rockefeller appeared to be on less than solid ground later in the afternoon.

"I think that Nelson Rockefeller is not as unpopular with conservative Republicans as some might imagine," said Sen. John G. Tower of Texas.

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said Rockefeller wasn't his first choice, but he praised the former governor. Sen. Bill Brock of Tennessee said the man from the rich and famous family would be acceptable in his border state.

HOUSE SPEAKER Carl Albert of Oklahoma said Ford had not yet asked for his views on a vice president, and said he wasn't sure he would make a recommendation if asked.

Many Republicans said they thought Ford might go beyond Congress in picking his No. 2 man, in view of the congressional role in forcing Nixon's resignation. Another non-member of Congress who has been mentioned as a possibility is former Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, whose name has appeared on some vice presidential lists, suggested that Sens. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts and Charles W. Percy of Illinois, as well as Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, would give "a broader base."

Wiggins says Ford will not pick elder statesman

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., predicted Friday that President Ford would not choose any of the Republican Party's "elder statesmen" as his vice president.

"I don't think any of the elder statesmen will be selected," said Wiggins,

NELSON ROCKEFELLER with picture of President Ford in background, bows head during prayer at GOP fund-raising dinner in Bangor, Maine, Friday.

ALL THREE are considered more liberal than Ford. Brooke, the Senate's only black member, was an early advocate of a Nixon resignation.

Congressional leaders, meanwhile, indicated that a planned 10-day recess would probably begin on schedule Aug. 23, assuming Ford names a vice presidential choice by then.

They indicated that the preliminary inquiries by the House Judiciary Committee and Senate Rules and Administration Committee could start, though formal confirmation hearings would be impossible before early September.

When Ford was picked by Nixon last October, the first vice president chosen to fill a vacancy under the 25th Amendment, it took Congress nearly two months to complete the confirmation process, though approval was nearly unanimous.

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — The chairman of the Young Republicans National Federation has urged President Ford to name Barry Goldwater as his vice president.

Dick Smith said in a telegram Friday that the Republican senator from Arizona is uniquely qualified to assist in unifying the American people.

Smith said the recommendation was expected to be supported by the Young Republicans' executive board meeting here this weekend.

Goldwater's "political and moral leadership are highly respected by a nation longing for the implementation of the principles it mandated in 1972," Smith said in a telegram.

He said the Young Republicans Federation represents some 500,000 members nationwide.

Wiggins, one of former President Richard M. Nixon's strongest supporters in Congress, said Rockefeller would be especially "inappropriate" to speak for and represent certain factions of the Republican Party.

"He (Ford) is surely going to stand for election...and he must think in terms of a running mate for two years from now," he said.

Nixon photos disappear from capital walls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pictures of Richard M. Nixon were replaced at the White House Friday with those of Gerald R. Ford.

The rapid change was apparently made by the White House staff seeking to speed the transition from one administration to the other.

The 10 photographs in the hallway outside the news office leading to the Oval Office that had shown Nixon now pictured Ford in different situations, including one with Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin.

Some of the photographs showed Ford with Nixon and speaking with former White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

At the Agriculture Department, where pictures of Nixon and Ford had hung on either side of the main door, only Ford's picture was in view Friday.

Ford seen in '76 race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said Friday he had no doubt that President Ford would run for the presidency in 1976.

"I cannot now conceive of him not being a candidate," Scott told a news conference less than three hours after Ford was sworn in as the 38th president.

"Already the '74 situation is moving up," he said, assessing his party's strength following the resignation of President Nixon.

"This is the first upbeat moment we've enjoyed in two years."

Scott also said: —Ford has told congressional leaders that his administration "will have as its hallmark 'openness and accessibility'."

—Former President Richard Nixon termed the situation "damned gloomy" after GOP leaders assessed support of conservative Democrats in the Senate on Thursday.

—Nixon's aides felt he "genuinely did not realize the implications of the June 23 (1972), meeting" in which he discussed the Watergate cover-up.

Nixon photos disappear from capital walls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pictures of Richard M. Nixon were replaced at the White House Friday with those of Gerald R. Ford.

The rapid change was apparently made by the White House staff seeking to speed the transition from one administration to the other.

The 10 photographs in the hallway outside the news office leading to the Oval Office that had shown Nixon now pictured Ford in different situations, including one with Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin.

Some of the photographs showed Ford with Nixon and speaking with former White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

At the Agriculture Department, where pictures of Nixon and Ford had hung on either side of the main door, only Ford's picture was in view Friday.

'I guess you just adjust'

Fords set to change life-style

United Press International

The nation's new first family likes the White House but won't be living there for several days.

Mrs. Ford, was asked when the family would move into the executive mansion vacated by the Nixons only hours before.

"I would hesitate to say," she replied. "I haven't really thought about it."

Later she told a friend in the receiving line in the ornate East Room that before the family moves "I have to get organized first. I was organized in the other direction."

The Fords had planned to move this fall into the house formerly set aside for the chief of naval operations, on the grounds of the U.S. Naval Observatory in the northwest section of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Ford had spent a great deal of time in recent weeks selecting furnishings for the ancient, barn-like structure, which Congress recently earmarked as a permanent vice presidential residence. Now she must leave that task to the wife of the next vice president and instead plan a move to the family quarters on the third floor of the historic building at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

The four Ford children, hurriedly assembled to see their father sworn in as the 38th U.S. President, described her as holding up well despite being "an emotional person" who is "quite tense about the entire situation."

Steve, the youngest son, said, "I think she's doing really well. These first few weeks are going to be very tough, but we did the same thing 10 months ago. I guess you just adjust."

The oldest son Michael, 24, and his blonde bride, Gayle, had moving problems of their own. They have rented a house near Michael's seminary in Massachusetts, and were ready to move when they were summoned to Washington for the swearing-in ceremony.

They flew down just for the day, leaving a rented truck loaded with their

Ford takes oath on same Bible he used as V.P.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bible upon which Gerald R. Ford's hand rested in taking the oath as President was opened to Proverbs, third chapter, the fifth and sixth verses.

The White House said he learned these verses many years ago and often says them as a prayer:

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; And lean not unto thine own understanding."

In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths."

The Bible used for the ceremony was purchased by Ford's oldest son, Michael, 24, a theology student at Gordon-Conwell Seminary in South Hamilton, Mass.

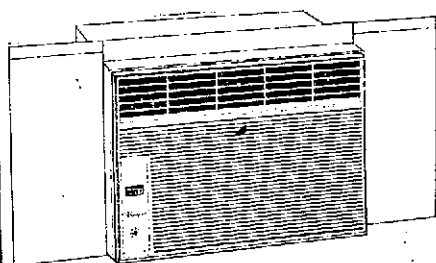

It is the same Bible used by Ford when was sworn in as vice president last December.

NIXON HOME

But as thousands filling the stands and lined up behind a chain fence interrupted the short speech several times with cheers and shouts of "Come over and shake hands," several thousand more would-be welcome were caught in their cars en route to the air station. A massive traffic jam stretched several miles from the air station's front gate, the cars unable to move because of lack of parking space at the station. Even as the giant helicopter slowly lifted the former president and his party skyward to their San Clemente home, the motorists continued to inch toward the air station terminal hoping to catch a glimpse of their former chief.

Earlier in Washington, in a tearful farewell to those who served his presidency, Nixon said greatness comes not in hours of triumph, but in times of knocks, disappointment, sadness.

"Only if you've been in the deepest valley can you ever know how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain," Nixon said as the clock ran out on his 5½ years in the White House.

THE FORMAL side of relinquishing the position was a one-sentence letter to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. "Dear Mr. Secretary," it said. "I hereby resign the office of President of the United States. Sincerely, Richard M. Nixon."

The letter was officially received at 8:35 a.m. PDT and at that moment Richard Nixon was, in Harry Truman's words, just "Mr. Citizen."

According to the flight plan, Nixon was over mid-America—central Missouri—at 9:03 a.m. PDT when Ford raised his hand for the oath—now spoken for the 38th time, but for the first by a man not chosen in national ballot.

He was bound for San Clemente and the estate he bought in the first year of his tenure. No longer will it be known as the Western White House.

To his coworkers at the White House, Nixon said that when things go wrong, when a man suffers defeat, some think that all is ended.

"Not true," he said. "It's only a beginning always. The young must know it, the old must know it. They must always sustain it because the greatness comes not when things go always good for you, but the greatness comes when you really take your knocks..."

He counseled: "We want you to be proud of what you've done. We want you to continue to serve in government if that is your wish. Always give your best. Never get discouraged. Never be petty. Always remember, others may hate you. Those who hate you don't win unless you hate them. And then you destroy yourself."

NIXON said, "We leave with high hopes, in good spirits and deep humility."

Nixon told his associates he was proud of each of them.

"As I pointed out last night, sure, we've done some things wrong in this administration, and the top man always takes the responsibility. I've never ducked it."

"But I want to say one thing—no man or no woman came into this administration and left it with more of the world's goods than when he came in. No man or no woman ever profited at the public expense or the public till."

Nixon made an oblique reference to the Watergate scandals that dogged his administration for nearly two years, building to the point where his choice was congressional removal from office or resignation.

"Mistakes, yes," Nixon said in an oblique reference to the scandal. "But for personal gain, never."

Nixon said he wished he were a wealthy man so he could reward those who served him. But, he said wryly, "At the present time I've got to find a way to pay my taxes."

THE farewell to the relative few was in sharp contrast to Nixon's 16-minute speech to the nation Thursday night. Then he was solemn and formal. The talk to his staff was intensely personal and intensely emotional. At times Nixon appeared on the verge of tears, and some in the audience began to weep openly.

Nixon spoke of his parents, his father, a street-car motorman, farmer, lemon rancher, grocer. "Sort of a little man, a common man," Nixon said. "But he was a great man. Because he did his job and every job counts up to the hill regardless of what happens."

He called his mother "a saint."

"I think of her two boys dying of tuberculosis, nursing four others in order that she could take care of my older brother for three years in Arizona and seeing each of them die and when they died it was like one of her own."

The nation's 37th president said he spent the last night in the executive mansion reading the words of the 26th, describing as a young man the death of his daughter.

"TR in his 20s thought the light had gone from his life, forever, but he went on," Nixon said. "He was a man. And as I leave, let me say that's an example I think all of us should remember."

Within minutes, Nixon, his wife, daughter Tricia and son-in-law Edward Cox, boarded a helicopter on the White House grounds to take them to Andrews Air Force Base, where they boarded the plane for California.

His last gesture on boarding both aircraft was arms outstretched high in a gesture of victory.

PROBLEMS

amnesty for Nixon, although he could be pardoned by President Ford.

Senate Republican leaders said Friday that Richard Nixon has been punished and disgraced enough because of the Watergate scandals and urged that he not be prosecuted.

Republican leader Hugh Scott said if Democrats pressed for the former president's prosecution for his admitted cover-up of the scandal it would be tantamount to "revenge."

"A POUND of flesh is enough," Scott told reporters following a meeting of all GOP senators. "Why should we demand the blood that goes with it?"

Sen. Norris Cotton, chairman of the conference of GOP senators, said Nixon's "punishment, agony and the disgrace he has undergone is probably the worst punishment there could be."

Both GOP leaders seemed to reflect the view of most Senate Republicans that the former president had suffered enough punishment by being forced to resign under the threat of impeachment and conviction by the Senate.

The White House said Friday that Nixon did not grant immunity or pardon to himself or anyone else before leaving office.

At his first news briefing, press secretary Jerry terHorst said, "President Nixon did not sign a pardon or any kind of immunity for himself or anyone else before he left the White House."

IN ADDITION, terHorst said that as far as he knows President Ford's position on immunity for Nixon has not changed since Ford testified in Senate hearings on his own confirmation as Nixon's vice president 10 months ago.

At that time, Ford was asked whether a president could pardon a former president if he assumed office in mid-term. Ford replied that he probably would have the power but added, "I don't think the public would stand for it."

The Washington Post, surveying "knowledgeable criminal lawyers," reported Nixon could be jailed for 30 to 60 years and fined $57,500 if convicted of obstruction of justice and other crimes spelled out in the articles of impeachment approved by the House Judiciary Committee.

Nixon has already been named an indicted conspirator in the cover-up by a grand jury that became convinced it could not indict a sitting president.

Last winter the White House disclosed that Nixon's net worth was just over $1 million, including $426,313 in cash savings.

A LARGE chunk of the savings was eaten up in April when Nixon was forced to pay $284,706 in back taxes after the Internal Revenue Service ruled against the controversial deduction of the gift of his vice presidential papers.

Nixon has said he will pay an additional $148,081 that the IRS listed as underpaid taxes in 1969. The IRS could not legally enforce this payment, since the statute of limitations has expired.

Nixon was unable to pay $188,884 due in July on his San Clemente property and he got a six-month delay. Also, Nixon still owes $161,000 on his Key Biscayne property.

Religious leaders concur

Time for a 'fresh beginning'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leaders of America's three great religious faiths said Friday President Nixon's resignation should be a time of "fresh beginning" without vindictiveness.

Terming the resignation announcement "an awesome moment in the life of the nation," the Interreligious Committee of General Secretaries said "it is a moment to pause and recollect and it can be a fresh beginning."

The Interreligious Committee is made up of Bishop James S. Rausch,

NEW YORK — Literary agent Scott Meredith said Friday that a close associate of Richard M. general secretary of the United States Catholic Conference; Dr. Claire Randall, general secretary of the National Council of Churches, and Rabbi Henry Siegman, executive vice president of the Synagogue Council of America.

TERMING the Watergate experience "excruciatingly painful," the three leaders said "we must be heartened by the capacity of the constitutional framework to survive, and more than to persist merely, but to positively prescribe viable and equitable measures for the continuance of the orderly processes of government."

Rabbi Alexander Shindler, president of the 1.1 million-member United American Hebrew Congregation, echoed Cary's concern.

Museum puts Nixon figure in storage

LONDON (UPI) — Madame Tussaud's wax museum removed Richard M. Nixon's figure from its Grand Hall of World Statesmen Friday and placed it in storage.

Nixon's strongest religious supporters, the Rev. Billy Graham, also urged unity and told the New York times he hoped Americans would "put the tragedy of Watergate behind us."

Dr. Carl F.H. Henry, one of the leading spokesmen of the evangelical wing of Protestant Christianity which gave Nixon a great deal of his political support, said the "democratic process which was so vigorously under attack has shown itself capable of toppling its most formidable leaders who invoked the system as a cloak for political abuses and illegalities."

NEW YORK (AP) — Terence Cardinal Cooke, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, led a congregation of about 400 in prayers Friday for the smooth transfer of presidential power.

Police fail to find gun suspect in duplex search

Associated Press

Los Angeles police searched a duplex apartment fruitlessly Friday night for an armed man who wounded a resident and reportedly barricaded himself in an apartment during a robbery attempt.

Officers surrounded the building and, after evacuating residents, fired at least five rounds of tear gas canisters and searched all the apartment units, but found no one, a police spokesman said. He said the gunman apparently had escaped. Officers said the residential neighborhood about five miles west of downtown Los Angeles was evacuated more than three hours after the man had gone to the apartment and attempted to rob the resident.

The occupant of the apartment was reported in stable condition at County-USC Medical Center with a bullet wound in his back. He was not identified.

Girl, 2, struck by car, dies

Rita Elaine La Mere, a 2-year-old Buena Park girl, died of head injuries at Children's Hospital in Orange Friday two hours after being struck by a car near her home, police said.

Officers said the girl, who lived at 7772 Court St., ran into Court about 11 a.m. as a car driven by George Vletas, 46, Beverly Hills, was passing.

Vletas and the girl's mother, Christine, 22, took her to the hospital, officers said. Vletas was not cited.

Alternate school use at Buffum protested

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Buffum School parents feel they weren't adequately consulted before a decision by a Long Beach Unified School District committee to urge alternate use of the school beginning next month, a spokesman for a Buffum neighborhood group said Friday.

But school district officials disagreed, saying the decision-making process was not secret and that they had met with the school's advisory board and PTA.

John Park, a spokesman for the newly formed neighborhood group, said school district officials had led Buffum parents to believe that Buffum was "way down on the list of possible schools that might be used for alternate purposes."

"We were shocked when we were told Aug. 2 that Buffum would be converted next fall," he said.

PARK SAID Buffum parents will attend Monday's Board of Education meeting "to protest losing our neighborhood school."

The board is slated to accept or reject the alternate use recommendation at the Monday meeting.

Buffum's principal has already been transferred to Burnett School and has not been replaced.

The committee has been studying seven schools for possible closure or alternate use. It recommended last Monday that Buffum be turned over to Los Angeles County next month for educating handicapped youngsters. Buffum children, in turn, would be transferred to Bixby or Signal Hill schools.

Buffum is located at 2350 Ximeno Ave. Bixby, within walking distance for most Buffum children, is at 5251 E. Stearns St. Signal Hill School is about a mile and a half away at 2285 Walnut Ave.

Buffum youngsters living east of Lakewood Boulevard would attend Bixby and those west of Lakewood would choose between Bixby and Signal Hill.

"We don't object to handicapped youngsters using Buffum — we don't mind sharing the school — but we do mind being thrown out," said Park, whose daughter attends Buffum.

With Buffum converted to the new use, there would be a total of five special schools used for exceptional children in the East Long Beach area, he said.

Park also objected to busing Buffum youngsters to Signal Hill School, citing a $20,000 figure that he said school officials had mentioned earlier for busing all the west-of-Lakewood youngsters to Signal Hill.

He said that before the proposal was modified in the Aug. 2 meeting with school officials, new residents in the west-of-Lakewood area would have to send their children to Signal Hill.

Park said that most Buffum parents didn't believe their children would get a lower quality education at Signal Hill. "All Long Beach schools offer a high quality education," he said, adding that parents were concerned about the long distance to Signal Hill.

"They'd be taking kids out of their familiar environment and moving them to an unfamiliar place," Park said.

He said that another concern of Buffum-area residents is that the lack of a neighborhood school will lower property values.

Associate Superintendent Vern Hinze defended the Buffum recommendation, saying that the program analysis committee had consulted with the Buffum advisory board and the PTA.

"Buffum was one of seven schools targeted for in-depth study by the committee last spring," he said. "That fact was widely known."

"WE KNOW the word got out because we received petitions last spring urging that the school remain open."

"No action was taken at last Monday's meeting in order to give parents, taxpayers and other interested citizens an opportunity to express their views on these proposals," he said.

"Under no circumstances would a Buffum pupil be required to attend a school other than Bixby without the full approval of his parents," Hinze said. "Attendance at Signal Hill School, under the proposal, would be strictly voluntary and even this option is being carefully reviewed by the Board of Education and has not been approved."

Hinze said Buffum was selected for alternate use because of its low enrollment (324 students last year) and its central location that made it a good site for alternate use.

The average size of Long Beach elementary schools is 450-600 students, he said, and 500 students is considered the best size.

Hinze said that closing other nearby schools, such as Bixby, was rejected because those students would have had to be dispersed among three or four different schools. School officials are certain that almost all Buffum youngsters will transfer to Bixby, giving Bixby's enrollment a large boost and allowing a single large increase in student support services.

HINZE SAID that some parents had been concerned that airport noise could be a problem at Bixby, but that the City Council Tuesday had changed Pacific Southwest Airlines flights to a different runway so they'll no longer pass over the school.

He added that under the proposal, Buffum youngsters living west of Lakewood Boulevard would be bused to school. Pupils living east of Lakewood would have to walk, but crossing guards would be on duty at key intersections.

Hinze said that closing Buffum could result in annual savings of $75,000 to the school district.

The saving is necessary because of a ceiling placed on school district expenditures by recent school finance laws and declining enrollment in Long Beach.

PLAYGROUND EQUIPMENT at Escuela de la Raza got a workout from the children Friday. "School of the People" serves the Spanish-speaking community in Long Beach and annually holds an open house for the public.

Beacon Street plan on agenda

Developers will seek to forge another link in the modernization of San Pedro's famed waterfront Monday when they appear before the regional coastal commission for permission to build a multimillion-dollar office, shopping and hotel complex there.

The commission will convene at 9 a.m. in the Long Beach Harbor Department's board room, 925 Harbor Plaza Drive.

The $7.9 million project, part of the Beacon Street Redevelopment plan, is to be located on 8.6 acres bounded by South Harbor Boulevard, West Third Street, and West Seventh Street.

The complex will include a seven-story, 120-room hotel/motel, an eight-story, 80,000-square-foot office structure and an 80,000-square-foot shopping center, according to planners for the Community Redevelopment Agency of Los Angeles.

The commercial complex is the second major portion of the Beacon Street Redevelopment Project to come before the coastal commission. Last October, commissioners approved the construction of 113 housing units for persons of low to moderate income and 361 units of housing for senior citizens.

'Smallfry' name of game as 900 kids fight red tide at Fish Rodeo

BY DON CULPEPPER
Outdoors Editor

The kids were there — nearly 900 of them — the bait was there, the enthusiasm was high, there were more than enough helpers from the Recreation Department and the Southern California Tuna Club, but the fish didn't cooperate well Friday at the 20th annual Kids All-City Fishing Rodeo at Belmont Pier.

Great streaks of red tide were all around the pier, and nobody liked that. So one couldn't blame the bass, corbina, halibut, bonito and other fish from keeping their distance as the youngsters tossed bait after bait into the water.

There were not enough species of fish caught to enable the boys and girls to take all the prizes offered by the Tuna Club. But fish were caught, even though small.

LYNETTE McKeown, 13, of 330 Grand Ave., won The Independent Press-Telegram Trophy for the largest fish caught by a girl. It was a 6½-ounce tomcod, something you could almost hide in your hand.

Mark Kenbel, 12, of 7079 Aivlis St., caught a sargo, weighing 11½ ounces, to take the I.P.T. trophy for the largest fish caught by a boy. June Ascolesi, general manager of Belmont Pier, and this writer presented trophies to the two winners.

Other trophies went to the following:

Russell Stevens, 2033 E. 4th St., buttermouth perch; Mike Losoya, 3300 Lajara St., turbot; Mark Lingo, 1990 Chestnut Ave., herring; Steve Warntjes, 1540 E. 215th St., Carson, mackerel; Dave Feindel, 2925 Coolidge St., white surf perch; Steve Dunn, 590 E. Pleasant St., starfish; Frank Murillo, 6 Squaw Peak Lane, Carson, smelt; Ken Gower, 5914 Lime Ave., tomcod; Greg Smith, 3101 E. Eighth St., yellowfin croaker.

Ernie Ramirez, 7053 San Miguel St., Paramount, crab; Ken Gower, pompano; Mark Kenbel, black croaker, and Paul Aguilar, 7118 Premium St., staghorn sculpin.

Ages of the young anglers ranged from 11 through 15. The less said about fish weights, the better!

Hal Clemens and John Aderson, Department of Fish and Game biologists, were there to identify the species.

Betty Brown, supervisor of special activities for the Recreation Department, was in charge of an efficient staff of workers: Glen Woodall, Earl Johnson, Jean Smith, John Kaisler, Diana Hasker, Dawn Hasker, Robert Willis, Rhonda Oliver, Jenny Lawrence and Bob Bernall.

Dick Cabe was chairman of the Tuna Club committee, which included Sid Ellis, Kelly Merrill, Lloyd Hunter, Joe Balon, William J. Holmes, Roy Cabe, Dr. J. Thomas Hardesty, Carter Boswell, Dr. William Ridgeway, Dr. Mulford Smith, Robert Yancy, Dr. Paul Southgate and Paul Southgate Jr., Harry Christenson and Roy Wolcott.

FISHING RODEO winners — the girl and boy catching the largest fish of the day — are presented their trophies by June Ascolesi, general manager of Belmont Pier, and Donnell Culpepper, outdoors editor of The Independent Press-Telegram. The lucky youngsters are Lynette McKeown, 13, and Mark Kenbel, 12, both of Long Beach.

When Escuela de la Raza moved into its new quarters at 2600 E. Seventh St. a month ago, organizers knew the rent would be high and the money to pay it scarce.

But that's the way it ought to be, they say. Escuela de la Raza (school of the people), which serves the Spanish-speaking community in Long Beach by means of various bilingual and bicultural programs, must be confronted with constant struggle to keep in tune with the needs of its people, organizers say.

Francisco Franco, Escuela's director, said this struggle will force the program to "struggle to get more money and set up new programs to keep us going — it gives us motivation."

"We don't want to get comfortable," he said. "We want to serve the people and that means continuing to fight."

The formula seems to work. Escuela de la Raza, the educational offshoot of the parent East Long Beach Neighborhood Center, has expanded in its four years of existence to currently offer help ranging from a psychological counseling service to a masters degree program, operated in conjunction with Pepperdine University.

(Many of the Escuela's programs are conducted in part with the parent organization.)

Franco said the operation is possible through federal and local grants, in particular from the California State Department of Education and the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, and contributions from the community.

THE GRANTS have allowed the Escuela to begin combating a trend that Franco says is responsible for many Chicanos having a handicap in the job market before they even meet a prospective employer. That trend is a 60 per cent dropout rate for Spanish-speaking students before they reach the tenth grade as compared to only a 30 per cent rate for other students.

Franco attributes the gap to the education system in general, which he said is "not gearing itself to the communicative abilities of Spanish-speaking children."

Educators are ignoring both the language and cultural skills, he said.

In answer to what Franco said he feels is an unacceptable void, Escuela has begun production of such educational aids as bilingual and bicultural children's books, television shows, slides and film strips and records.

The entire project, except for the actual marketing of the products, will be carried out by Escuela volunteers. They will do the art work, designing and writing and perform other necessary skills.

Franco said the hope is that the Long Beach Unified School District will decide to incorporate some of the material into its curriculum. He said International Bookstore, a retail outlet which handles such material, has expressed an interest in marketing some of the Escuela's products.

While the Escuela's main function is to provide educational, recreational and nutritional services to the Chicano children in the community, it also offers a number of other programs and services.

These include: —A health component which performs two main functions: making certain that children in the Escuela as well as their families receive the medical care necessary for a normal and healthy life, and insuring that they are made aware of these services.

—Psychological services designed to provide counselors with the cultural knowledge Escuela maintains the "traditional" psychologist does not have.

—Nutrition component which provides meals to meet a child's nutritional needs. Nutritional problems are spotted with the aid of the Los Angeles County Nutrition Division.

—Bilingual-bicultural Educational Research Center headquartered at Long Beach State University, which has developed a self-assessment process and completed a written evaluation of the Escuela's pre-school and summer projects.

—Manpower development program seeks to provide the skills necessary to become competitive in the labor market.

Franco said that since the various programs may be offered at locations other than at the Escuela, persons should call the Escuela for further information on each program.

Franco said the Escuela is currently collecting shoes and clothing.

He said clothing donation may be brought to the Escuela.

The Escuela is directly serving 12,000 families, he said, adding that while the main focus is to provide help to Spanish-speaking children and their families, all other nationalities and races are welcome.

Agency needs interpreters

More Spanish-speaking people should be hired by the community relations division of the Long Beach Department of Community Development, John T. Murray of the Human Relations Commission said this week.

Murray, a Long Beach State University representative on the commission, said he has been working as an intern with community relations for the past seven weeks.

He commended the division's work, but said there was a need for Spanish-speaking interpreters. At present, he said, the only person available is Mrs. Bernarda Martinez.

Murray said he had been making calls with Mrs. Martinez to homes of low-income, Spanish-speaking families, and told commissioners that conditions under which many of them live are "unbelievable."

"There are six or seven people living in one room and paying outrageous rent," he said. "Many speak no English."

The Health Department has no Spanish-speaking nurses.

Owners asked to claim dogs boarded at kennel

The owners of dogs boarded at the Holiday Pet Beauty Salon kennels, 1544 W. Gaylord St., are asked to call the kennels and make arrangements to claim their pets.

The kennels' owner, Ed Parks, 57, who had suffered a heart attack five weeks earlier, died Aug. 2 without leaving complete records about the dogs boarded in his establishment.

His son-in-law, Tom Bailey, said there are two dozen animals at the kennels, some boarded by owners and others which are strays the late proprietor took off the street.

L.B. school aid passed

SACRAMENTO — Legislation making the Long Beach Unified School District eligible for participation in the state's Educationally Disadvantaged Youth program — and for about $1.2 million in additional funds — Friday was approved by the Senate.

Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, said his bill would benefit approximately 25,000 children in the Long Beach and San Diego school districts.

His bill received a 22-8 vote and now will be considered by the Assembly.

He said Gov. Reagan's administration, once opposed to the measure, now supported it.

The bill carries an appropriation of $2.6 million, he said, but added that the net total cost would be about a million dollars less because not all of the $82 million currently budgeted for the statewide EDY program will be used.

Two senators, John Nejedly, R-Contra Costa, and Walter Stiern, D-Bakersfield, opposed the bill, arguing that the need was not limited to urban schools and should be extended to rural districts with large percentages of children from low income families.

Deukmejian said the program already did apply to such districts, but argued that under the existing formula Long Beach and San Diego missed qualifying.

Earl Wilson Show biz views end to Nixon era

NEW YORK — The other night I wandered through Broadway and the show business area, seeking a tiny footnote to history. One of the biggest news stories was crashing around my head. How did the glamour people respond on the monumentally dramatic night when President Richard Nixon struggled within his soul on the verge of resignation?

Now that Nixon seemed doomed, they could speak fearlessly. They were generally blissfully unsympathetic.

A few confessed pangs of pity. But many could not contain their happiness.

Sammy Davis, who publicly hugged the President and later said he'd be careful whom he hugged next time, was cautiously compassionate when reached at Harrah's Lake Tahoe, Nev. "We as Americans should cool it," said Sammy. "It is very easy to get on the bandwagon, but I think he should get 100 points for trying to do whatever he's going to do with dignity. He's going to do whatever is right!"

THE SUPPER crowd at Sardi's was more interested in supper than in Nixon.

"Show business is the wrong group to expect sympathy for Nixon," said Vincent Sardi. "We go back to Helen Gahagan Douglas" — a reference to a Nixon long-ago political tactic, branding a competitor a Communist.

Over at Gallagher's steak house, the handsome urbane maitre d' Joe made a confession.

SAMMY MARTHA DAVID DICK

"WE HAD to take Nixon's picture off the wall weeks ago. Some people wouldn't sit under it. At first we taped it over, then we put Casey Stengel's picture in its place."

Martha Mitchell had just been seen at The Lair. "She wasn't so crazy after all," somebody said. "She's been saying that King Richard would have to abdicate."

In aristocratic El Club, a materialist said "Nixon should have kept us in suspense. The market went up 40 points in two days — maybe it will break 1000 again."

Comedian Dick Shawn, happy with a Watergate routine which had been getting "better daily," said Nixon "shouldn't get off the hook ... he should go through the aggravation he put us through ... I have no sympathy for him ..."

DAVID FRYE, the comic who's been impersonating Nixon since 1966, said in Miami that he might continue doing a Nixon who believes till the end of time that he's President. Eight years ago, Frye had Nixon saying, "I don't know whether to let the Republican party go down the drain by itself or go right in there and do it for them."

"I have done Nixon so long I have sympathy for him," said Frye. "I guess I feel I'm him."

Some comedians were worried as much as Nixon was. At Catch a Rising Star, a night club, an amateur had got no applause for a Nixon impersonation. "It proves," the amateur said, "either he should have quit or I should."

Drama added to capitol prayer day 'If My People..'

By LES RODNEY

Dramatic events in the nation's capital will add to the previously planned "International Day of Repentance and Intercession" to be held in Washington, D.C. next Saturday, Aug. 17th.

Titled "If My People..." it is based on II Chronicles 7:14, where God promises He will hear the prayer of those who call Him Lord, and will restore their land if they will humble themselves to turn from "their wicked ways." The reference to his people is seen by the sponsors as placing the burden on the believers, not the sinners.

Purpose is declared as twofold: prayer and intercession by believers for the nation, and also to call the attention of the rest of the population to the need before God for a major spiritual turnaround.

After the prayer at the Washington Monument, those gathered will move to the Soviet embassy where they will kneel and pray for Christians of that country. There will be no songs, speeches or fanfare, say the sponsors, just prayer.

Among those scheduled to join the prayers are Sen. Mark Hatfield, Pat Boone, David Wilkerson, Paul Little of Inter Varsity and Corrie Ten Boom. Says Hatfield: "In love with our own national successes, we have forgotten the God who has created, sustained and will ultimately consummate our lives. We cannot expect to escape the judgment of God without repenting of our national sins of materialism, nationalism, and neglect of the poor and needy whom God has called his children. 'If My People...' is a very positive step toward bringing the nation to an acknowledgment of its sins and of its need for divine forgiveness."

Wilkerson adds: "I believe this international call for a return to God is a direct fulfillment of Bible prophecy."

Church Women United informs us they still have some of the attractive note paper with envelopes illustrated by Long Beach children, at $2.25 for a package of a dozen, with three different designs.

It is for the benefit of the Boyd Memorial Foundation of Long Beach, whose goal carried out now for two years since the death of Dr. Jesse Boyd of Grant Chapel A.M.E. is "to assist in developing self-esteem, self-understanding and pride in the ethnic backgrounds of minority persons, teaching in an atmosphere of love, not hate."

Lutherans? Everybody knows the answer to that --Minnesota, as always. Baptized Lutheran membership in 1973 in the North Star State was 1,077,444, followed by Wisconsin with 972,138 and Pennsylvania with 848,104.

Then come Pennsylvania, Illinois and Indiana, followed by California with 409,398, led by members of the Missouri Synod, 167,175 to be exact, which is more than Missouri Synod members in Missouri.

Lutherans are scarcest in Vermont, followed by Maine and New Hampshire. The Germans and Scandinavians apparently moved right through New England en route to Minnesota and Wisconsin.

THE WORLD Council of Churches plans to establish a bank that would use millions of dollars of church investment reserves to aid in self-development of poor people around the world.

The "Church World Bank" proposal, if approved by the Council's Central Committee, would provide churches an alternative to tying up their investments in secular organizations with whose outlook on social and economic justice they might disagree.

It is estimated that in the United States alone, Protestant churches have at least $22 billion in investment portfolios. It is not known what amount Roman Catholics pump into the world economy.

The concept, says a spokesman, "would allow churches, at the lowest interest rates possible, to provide credits to the poorest section of the population... they can show their Christian principles by helping to get projects launched that would have no chance without their money."

The Church Council's bank would back up its loans to indigenous groups by making available to them expertise in developing their industries.

Robert McNamara, director of the World Bank, has reviewed the plan and is so much in accord with its principles that he will send an associate to the Central Committee to encourage support for it.

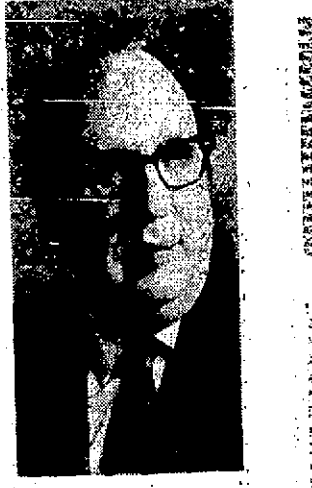

Lutheran college

The board of directors of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has authorized one million dollars for site work, first phase of the construction of Christ College Irvine.

'The Lord's Joyful'

Forty five-voice youth singing group of Christ Lutheran Church, 'The Lord's Joyful,' will embark on annual tour next week, 18 days in northern California, Oregon and Washington, under direction of Mrs. Eleanor McClintock, church music minister. They will present a pre-tour concert Sunday, 8:15 and 11 a.m. in the church, at 6500 Stearns St.

Mission

Rev. A. C. Edwards, field evangelist for the Friends of Israel Missionary and Relief Society, Inc., will be guest speaker Sunday, 10:45 a.m. in Bethany Baptist Church, 2250 Clark Ave. He was superintendent of a Hebrew Mission, and has had a radio program for the past 12 years.

Inner City Ministry — 'Truly work God wants us to do'

Rev. Fred Newkirk of the Long Beach Inner City Ministries will be the pulpit guest Sunday at 8:30 and 10 a.m. in Lakewood First United Methodist Church, 4300 Bellflower Blvd., and his work will not be unknown to the congregation.

"Though we have supported the Inner City Ministries on certain special occasions," says Charles S. Benner of the church's Missions Commissions, "this is the first year it has been included in our church budget as a major Second Mile project. We are quite excited about Rev. Newkirk's work as we have wanted to be involved with the problems of the central area of Long Beach, but somehow our efforts in the past seemed to always fall short of our intended goals."

"The approach he is making seems to be reaching those individuals we have found it impossible to reach," continued the lay leader, "and we believe this is truly the work God would have us do."

Inner-City Ministries is composed of director-pastor Newkirk and a full-time volunteer staff of 10-15 men and women. There are other part time volunteers. The staff, which likes to call itself "God's Army," gets together for Bible studies and worship regularly. Many of the male members live together in a staff house.

The ministry is up to its neck in its busiest year since its formation by Newkirk, who left a Quaker parish to follow a call into the central city ministry. Its camping program is going full blast, with 95 children having left downtown recently for a camp session, another 20 mothers and fathers to a family camp, and 25 backpackers into the High Sierras for seven days.

This month, there is a travel camp to the Grand Canyon, and a leadership camp for 100 high school and college age youth from Watts, Compton and Long Beach in the High Sierras.

"By the end of the summer," says Newkirk, "we hope to have touched the lives of 500 youths and parents from the Long Beach area, through our camping program."

Among year-round activities is the mini auto clinic, an automotive training school at 3001 Pacific Ave.

Atlantic Richfield Co. for $1 leased the Inner City Ministries an unused station for one year. The ministry came up with a master truck mechanic, Wally Ochs, and assistant George Clay, being trained as a second teacher. A couple of young people at a time are taught a Grade in auto repair. "Our teaching materials are the cars and trucks of the public who need a first class repair program with a low cost price," explains Newkirk.

A new reading and math basic skills school has been opened using facilities at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, directed by Mike Varney, former public school teacher who is dedicating his life to teaching these needed skills to inner-city youngsters.

"Because of our being around on a 24-hour basis," adds the minister, "we are also involved in emergency aid, counseling and advocacy work in the courts and welfare offices. Our work is limited only by funds and the need for more volunteers—especially in the tutoring program on basic skills."

All of this activity, he adds, "is designed to allow our staff to more effectively tell inner-city residents that Jesus Christ is living and wants to help us. His children! We believe the church of Jesus Christ calls for us to live out our witness actively in the inner city."

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Your un-secret weapon

When I was a youngster, I worked for an uncle of mine in Iowa one summer. Uncle Will was in the real estate business. He'd buy a plot of unimproved land, stake it out and then hold a lot sale. My job was to do the staking and to paint the posts.

"When everything was ready, he would walk along the main street of the small town with a ten dollar gold piece in his hand (remember them?) and say to people whom he would pass on the street, 'I'm going to give away a ten dollar gold piece on the corner at two o'clock this afternoon.'"

Well, they may have thought he was a bit cracked, and some of them didn't believe him, but at two o'clock he would be down at the corner and there would be a sizable crowd around him. He passed out slips of paper, had everyone write his name, put the slip in a hat, got some little girl to draw one, and the person whose name was drawn would be richer by that ten dollar gold piece.

THIS WAS his way of advertising his lot sale. It worked too. He made enough so that he could afford to lend me the money to go through college. He made me pay it back too, every penny, with interest. He was that kind of man — if you borrowed money, you paid it back. And if you had money, you used it to help others get ahead. He was always thinking up original ideas. Others would say, "Why didn't I think of that?"

Uncle Will died some time ago, but I remember him as a wonderful man. He made his way up from humble beginnings. He made the most of his abilities, and was a great inspiration to me and to others.

In the South I sometimes stay in a hotel whose owner posts signs in the rooms, many of them his original sayings. One reads, "There are vast, unexplored resources under your hat." I think of this when I think of my uncle — he knew how to explore his own resources. Have you ever analyzed the unexplored resources under your own hat?

No one of us has ever tapped a fraction of what is in us. But we should, and we can, if we make up our minds to do so and are willing to live by God's laws and let them guide us. The history of our country is the story of people who have been able to see and meet the opportunities offered them by the American way of life. Everyone, whatever his background, has the same opportunity. You have only to remember that you are a child of God and therefore have within you His vast resources awaiting discovery.

That factual and realistic book, the Bible, says: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? ... For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion ... It is indeed a creature of great potential that God has created. We need not only humility, but also a proper sense of self-esteem. Part of man is of the earth, there is no denying that. But the greater part, what John Donne called 'the immortal part,' comes from heaven, and we must not forget it.

IT IS PATHETIC when any man is beaten and downcast, and it is tragic when a man has lost respect for the enormous potential within himself. Almighty God made you equal to any problem or difficulty that can ever face you. Think of all that He stored up in you; the ability to feel and think, to hope, to dream, to create. He gave you the ability to suffer, to struggle, to love, to pray and to believe. What more do you need?

'Planet Earth' and 'Living Bible'

Authors explain their religion best-sellers

By KARL KARLSON
Ridder News Service

The biggest sellers in religious books these days are those by Hal Lindsey and the "Living Bible," a paraphrase by Kenneth Taylor.

Lindsey's three books have sold 10 million copies since 1970. The "Living Bible" has sold 18 million copies since it was completed in 1971. It accounted for half of all the Bibles sold last year in the United States, about 8 million copies.

Lindsey and Taylor, in interviews at the 25th annual Christian Booksellers Association Convention in Minneapolis, said conditions in society caused the books' success.

BOTH SAID the books are reaching out of the usual religious circles in the secular world for readers. Editions of the religious books appear on the racks of newsstands at airports, drugstores and general bookstores whereas 10 years ago they would probably only be found in religious bookstores or church bookshelves.

"People were ready for it and open for spiritual trust," Taylor said. "Twenty years ago, people found it very difficult to talk about religion and God. Nowadays, they seem happy and eager to."

Lindsey, whose book, "The Late Great Planet Earth," has sold 6 million copies and "Satan is Alive and Well on Planet Earth," has sold 3 million, said his books would not have been successful 10 years ago.

"There is concern among people over the changes in society now and 'Planet Earth' shows how these changes were prophesied (in the Bible and by biblical scholars) years ago," Lindsey said.

He said his books are accepted because he doesn't "hit readers over the head...I lay out the facts and let them decide." He said usually the decision is that he is right, thus leading the reader closer to Jesus Christ.

LINDSEY WAS plugging his new book, "Liberation of Planet Earth," in which he deals with his own conversion and "what's wrong with man and society."

"We're seeing the effects of teaching of situation ethics where people have no absolute standards and therefore act only in their own selfish interests," Lindsey said.

A former tugboat captain-seminarian-lecturer turned writer, Lindsey said modern psychiatry has been wrong in teaching that man is basically good. "Man is born incomplete, apart from God. Man has to get in the right relationship with God to end alienation of the world and his fellow man."

"The basic appeal of the 'Living Bible' is its readability," Taylor said. "The archaic language of most other editions made it difficult for people to read."

Farr Family returns

Big hit here last year, the eight-member Farr Family, on seventh tour of country, will present a concert Sunday, 10:30 a.m. in First Church of the Brethren, 3332 Magnolia Ave., titled "A Celebration of Love." They have recorded eight albums, are heard over 100 radio stations.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

is God a STRANGER TO YOUR child?

He needn't be. In the Christian Science Sunday School, children learn that God is not a stranger, but a close friend. Through weekly Bible Lessons they learn to turn to His all-embracing love for protection and help. They are prepared to meet each day's problems successfully. Bring your child to our Sunday School this week. We'd love to welcome him.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Finds you moving ahead toward a simpler, more spiritual life with fewer, yet more positive commitments. Relationships either become stronger or lapse.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Facts from far away are easily adapted into effective local information. People shift speed and direction without warning; give them plenty of room to do so. Your personal touch is important now.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Consult experts, but check to see whether their suggestions realistically assess your situation. Intuition comes in bright and clear--are you listening?

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Slackening pace is beneficial. Attend to routine, rather than push large, new projects. Say or do more to express deep feelings where it counts.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Some complexities in arrangements are inevitable. Keep business in its appropriate time and place; don't talk shop at home. Add to savings account where possible.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Your own pride, as well as that of others, gets in the way. Travel requires extra care. A bright idea in late evening promises exceptional benefit, once you iron out the main details.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ways to build seem few. A gentle suggestion on any issue is sufficient. Elegant, expensive items arouse impulses to spend money.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pause for explanations before going ahead with what seems to be a good thing. There will be another, and more effective, opportunity if you wait. Keeping your temper saves the day.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Find a way to get better working conditions and to save your strength for a greater purpose tomorrow. Check facts and figures. Most stories are still incomplete.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Moments of antagonism come between even the closest personal ties. Find where you can work in solitude. Today's studies develop useful knowledge.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finish what you've been doing before going on to new projects. You can talk family and associates into almost anything reasonable today. Why not give it a try?

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): People who usually agree with you continue to do so, while those on the borderline join your opponents. It's no time to force issues or assume any special authority.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Pausing to verify avoids inconvenience and conserves resources. Expand daily routines to cover current responsibilities, since extra demands are certain.

Nixon's farewell in focus

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

"What did you think of Nixon's talk?"

The question regarding the President's resignation address to the nation was asked many times Friday of many people throughout America.

If I had to sum up my reaction to the talk in one word, that word would be: Predictable.

Nixon said just what I thought he would say. As usual on television, he said what he thought would make him come across best to the viewers.

No expletives. No bitterness toward his critics.

And no admission of wrongdoing, of guilt. No apology, no remorse. And no explanation of his behavior in the Watergate cover-up. No mention of it.

He said he was resigning because the "interests of America" required it. He didn't say he was resigning because the interests of Richard Milhouse Nixon required it.

Did I believe him? No. Why should I believe a man who has shown so little regard for the truth, who has deceived his countrymen for so long?

In my view, he resigned because he knew he would be impeached and convicted and for no other reason. If he had thought he had any chance of escaping conviction, he wouldn't have resigned, in my opinion.

TELEVISION commentators and the many notable persons interviewed following Nixon's TV address leaned over backward, for the most part, in treating the resigning President gently.

It was as though they were afraid of being criticized for kicking a man while he's down.

Just as when a famous person dies, they did not want to emphasize the bad but rather the good in that person. At least, in front of a nationwide television audience.

I had the feeling that the TV commentators and others who expressed their views on television Thursday night did not say all they would have said had they been conversing simply with family or friends. Like Nixon, they, too, were thinking of their image.

Among viewers in their homes throughout America, the Nixon talk touched off much stronger language in many cases. I would imagine, than was heard on the tube.

Even a few expletives, perhaps.

ANGIE DICKINSON and other members of the cast and crew of NBC's new fall series "Police Woman," were in Long Beach the past couple of days shooting part of an episode involving a bank robbery.

The shooting took place at the Crocker National Bank on Bellflower Boulevard.

EDDIE ALBERT and his son, Edward Albert, will appear together professionally for the first time in major guest-starring roles in the two-hour, third-season premiere of ABC's "Kung Fu" series, starring David Carradine.

This will mark Edward Albert's debut in a TV series role. He had key parts in the movies "Butterflies Are Free" and "40 Carats."

JOHN DAVIDSON will play a dual role — that of a man and a one-time famous movie actress — in the "Mask of Death" episode.

Senate votes to eliminate holiday

...and here come the Big Three!

CLEMMONS, N.C. (UPI) — Gary Player tied the tournament record with a six-under-par 64 Friday and moved within two strokes of the second round lead in the PGA championship to set up the possibility of a classic finish involving three of golf's greatest names.

Although John Schlee, the in-house astrology expert of the pro golf tour, held the 36-hole lead with a five-under-par 135 following his 67 Friday, everyone's attention was fixed on the "big three" that trailed him by so little.

PGA leaders

Player In	423	544	244	32

Hubert Green was alone in second place with a pair of 68s for 136. But then came:

- Player, trying to join Ben Hogan as the only man ever to win three major championships in a single year, in a tie at 137 with fellow South African Bobby Cole.

- Jack Nicklaus, following his second successive 69, at 138;

- Lee Trevino, with a 66 of his own on Friday, at 139.

Player came charging down the stretch on the muddy and rain-drenched 7,050-yard Tanglewood Golf Club layout with one of the most impressive rounds of shotmaking ever seen in this 56-year-old championship.

He sank six birdies in a seven-hole stretch from the eighth through the 14th hole and actually got within a single stroke of Schlee's lead before faltering only slightly with a bogey at No. 17.

"I didn't start until long after John finished so I knew that I was eight strokes back by the time I teed off," said Player.

"I just wanted to make up as much ground as possible."

The 64 tied the tournament mark established 10 years ago by Bobby Nichols at Columbus, Ohio, and tied by Nicklaus in the same tournament. Player, seeking to add the PGA title to go along with the Masters and the British Open this year, had opened with a 73 on Thursday. He was being counted out early when a downpour forced postponement of play for 45 minutes and came just before he began play.

Until then, it didn't look like anyone was about to challenge Schlee's total, a figure which Nicklaus said was amazing.

"I'm amazed that someone can shoot 135 out here," said Jack, who was "delighted" with his own 136. "That (135) is awfully good scoring."

Schlee, one of three players who shared the first round lead, chipped in from 80 feet on one hole for a birdie, sank a 22-foot par putt at the final green, and credited his standing to luck—and the stars.

GREEN, the No. 2 moneywinner on this year's PGA tour who, like Schlee, is seeking his first major championship, was in a brief tie for the lead until the rain hit.

He was forced to play four holes in the downpour, sloshing his way to two successive bogeys that knocked him out of the tie, before officials finally suspended play for 45 minutes. When it resumed, Green went back to the 16th green, where he already had hit his tee shot, and knocked in a 25-foot birdie putt.

That was early. Player was just getting started; the hungry Nicklaus and Trevino already were through for the day.

"It was a most unusual round for me," said Nicklaus. "I didn't play all that well."

Nicklaus finished on No. 18 in the rain, leaving a 45-foot putt 16 feet short and then dropping it from there for a par.

Trevino, who made seven birdies and three bogeys in his 66—the tournament's best round before Player finished—said, "the scoring conditions were ideal."

"WITH GREENS as soft as they are, if you drive well you can score well, because they can't put the pins anywhere you can't get to them," Trevino said.

Player was 1-under-par for the day when he started his magnificent surge with a seven-foot birdie

He's the guy who was brought up from Albuquerque, spent two months warming up pitchers in the bullpen and then was sent back to the minors without once getting into a game.

But don't close the book on L. Robby. Not just yet, anyway. He might be the difference between the Dodgers winning and losing the pennant in the National League West.

their third game in a row Friday night, 6-3 to the St. Louis Cardinals, yet retain a 5½-game lead over Cincinnati, simply are out of catchers.

Steve Yeager, who will hobble out there again tonight, has painful groin pull and spends more time soaking in ice than does a martial.

Joe Ferguson also has a pulled muscle, in his rib cage, and he can throw the ball only as far as the pitcher's mound which isn't far enough when, say, Lou Brock is on first base.

Gale Hopkins is the only other catcher on the roster but he has played more outfield than catcher and is primarily a pinch hitter anyway.

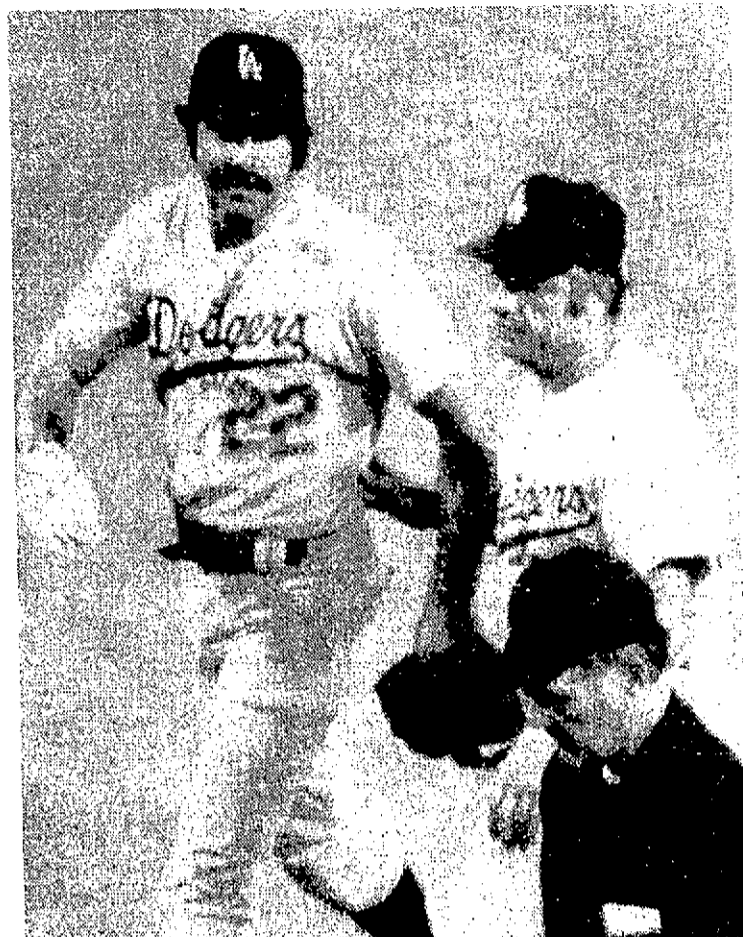

"With that in mind," a rather disgusted manager Walter Alston said after Friday night's defeat, "it's kind of absurd for anyone to get thrown out of a game."

Not one, but two Dodgers were given the heave—Bill Buckner in the first inning and Yeager in the ninth.

Buckner's exit, after he was thrown out trying to steal, may have set some sort of record for distance. He was in leftfield when the umpire at first base, John Kibler, threw him out of the game. Buckner argued that the pitcher, Alan Foster, had balked.

Von Joshua, Buckner's replacement, tripled in a run, but he also dropped a Washington's only points came on a 46-yard first quarter field goal by Mark Moseley, a fourth-year pro who was the most seasoned man on the Redskins' squad as the NFL players' strike continued.

Rookie Matthew Williams ran for two touchdowns and Terrence Wells added another as Houston manhandled Washington in the error-marred game.

Hadl vs. Staubach... and some other guys

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

It will be John Hadl against Roger Staubach when the Rams play the Dallas Cowboys at the Coliseum tonight, but who are all those other guys?

The starting lineups for the 7 p.m. exhibition bear little resemblance to those that last struggled in a National Conference semifinal at Dallas last December, but a crowd of about 50,000 is expected.

Hadl will have only two other regulars in his offense—wide receiver Jack Snow and guard Joe Seibelli—plus wide receiver Lance Rentzel, who will be playing his first game in two years following the suspension by National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle.

One other 1973 Ram starter, cornerback Eddie McMillan, will start on defense, along with veteran reserve tackle Bill Nelson.

None of the above was present for last week's opening 24-21 win over Cleveland engineered by Ron Jaworski, who will see more action after Hadl's first-half appearance, to be followed by James Harris.

Likewise, Staubach, who also reported to training camp after last week's opening 27-7 loss to Oakland, will give way to Craig Morton, who has been in the Cowboys' camp at Thousand Oaks all along, for all the good it has done him.

"My role is going to be the same as it has been," says Morton, who has long since conceded the starter's spot to Staubach. "I'm going to be backup to Roger. If I couldn't win it in the past, I'm certainly not going to win it by coming to camp before Roger does."

One reason Morton's snub of the NFL Players' Assn. strike hasn't won any points with coach Tom Landry could be that Morton will not be in the NFL after this season. He has signed a future contract with the Houston Texans of the World Football League.

In fact, the WFL is picking off the Cowboys like Indians.

Also due to join the new league at various future dates are running back Calvin Hill, linebacker D.D. Lewis, wide receiver Otto Stowe, offensive tackle Rayfield Wright, defensive tackle Jethro Pugh and running back Marv Montgomery, who has already been traded to the Houston Oilers.

Rentzel, who once played for Dallas, isn't surprised.

"It's not a happy organization," says Lance.

But the Cowboys will field more regulars than the Rams tonight. Besides Staubach, they'll have three of their offensive linemen—John Niland, Ralph Neely and Dave Manders, defensive backs Charlie Waters, Benny Barnes and Cornell Green, linebacker Leroy Jordan and defensive tackle Bob Lilly.

Niland, devoutly religious, explained his defection from the strike: "It's

Brock, Marshall enliven summer

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A man needs a strong stomach to read the papers these days, with page one monopolized by a former Sunday school teacher who played football, not very well, for Whittier College and the sports section reflecting a growing ugliness between the National Football League's striking players and their union-busting bosses.

Not all the news is that unappetizing. On a good day one can read about two of the most exciting athletes to brighten the baseball scene in any season — the agreeably larcenous Louis Clark Brock from El Dorado, Ark., and Michael Grant Marshall of Adrian, Mich.

Back in June when the St. Louis Cardinals were in New York, the gracefully aging Brock attended a party following the Mets' annual old timers gala. Seymour Siwoff, who thinks in statistics, suggested that the burning question was whether Brock would steal 100 bases this year before Marshall pitched in his 100th game.

The remark was meant lightly, for only once since man learned to walk on his hind legs has a baserunner brought off 100 thefts under conditions that obtain today, and no man living or dead ever pitched in 100 games — not even old Hoss Radbourn the year he won 60.

Nevertheless, the other night Brock stole No. 75 as the Cardinals beat Montreal, and Marshall made his 75th appearance in relief for the Dodgers. With almost one-third of the season remaining, both can be expected to set records if they stay healthy and don't punch their employers in the mouth.

EARLY RECORDS OF piracy are full of discrepancies. One book credits Harry Stovey with 156 steals for Philadelphia in 1888 and another gives him 87. One lists 115 for Billy Hamilton of the Phillies in 1891 and the other says 111. When Stovey was running lose the catcher played back and caught the pitch on the first bounce, and there was a time when a man got credit for a stolen base if he advanced on a fielder's choice.

The record Lou Brock is threatening, the only valid one, was set by Maury Wills in 1962 when he stole 104 bases, shattering Ty Cobb's modern mark of 96. That was Brock's first full season as an outfielder with the Cubs, and no doubt he remembers how joyously exciting Wills was.

When the Dodgers made their last visit of the year to Chicago, they appeared to have the pennant in hand. The Cubs were ninth, leading only the newborn Mets, so no championship delusions roused the customers in Wrigley Field. Yet any time Wills got on base, electricity crackled through the stands. "Go!" the Chicago crowd chanted. "Go! go! go!" and when Maury took off you could hear a whistling intake of breath.

The Dodgers fell into a swoon that season, were tied by San Francisco and lost the playoff in spite of Wills. Even with Brock running the opposition crazy, this could happen to the Cardinals, but the St. Louis players don't believe it.

"He's a one-man offense," says Joe Torre. "He's the greatest single offensive force I've seen," says John Curtis, the pitcher.

Generally speaking, baseball is a game of pitching and hitting. But for Brock a walk is the equivalent of a two-base hit, for as soon as he gets to first he steals second, whence he can score on almost any hit.

AS A WEAPON in psychological warfare he is even more effective. Nobody who was there could forget how the dashing Dodgers of Wills, Willie Davis and Wes Parker turned the 1965 World Series around. The Twins beat Don Drysdale and Sandy Koufax in Minnesota and were leading, two games to none, when they moved to Los Angeles. In three games there the Dodgers stole nine bases, and made the American League champions look like a demoralized sandlot team.

Brock now has the major league record for stealing 50 or more bases a year in 10 consecutive seasons. He will be the first to lead the majors in larceny six times, and he soon will pass Honus Wagner's lifetime total of 722 steals. Lou now stands fifth with 710. He plans to stay around long enough to beat the all time mark, Cobb's 892.

Meanwhile, the unthinkable, indestructible, indefatigable Marshall walks in, rocks back and throws. Appearing in seven of every 10 games, he has won 11 and saved 16, so he has already been a major factor in 27 victories. When he makes his 83rd appearance he will break the all-time record set last year by a Montreal pitcher named Michael Grant Marshall.

Apologies of these records, every one knows that the most accomplished freebooter in baseball — not counting owners — was Max Carey, a divinity student abandoned to sin, who in 1922 attempted 53 thefts and was apprehended only twice. However, Carey does not hold the lifetime record getting off scot free. That is shared by Spiro Agnew and Gus Triandos, the sterling catcher who played 1206 games over 13 seasons between 1953 and 1965 and never once was caught stealing. Not that Triandos wouldn't take a chance and steal a base, because he did. Gus stole one in 1958.

Six wins in row for Barr

CHICAGO (UPI)—Gary Matthews and Dave Kingman each hit his 12th homer Friday to help right-hander Jim Barr to his sixth successive victory in a 3-0 San Francisco shutout over Chicago.

It was Barr's fourth shutout and 10th win against five defeats, while it was the 12th time the Cubs have been blanked this season.

The win ended a two-game losing streak for the Giants and extended the Cubs' losing skein to five games.

No longer in hibernation

Shooting 66 cure-all for grumpy Lee Trevino

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — The debate over who is the best golfer in the world—Jack Nicklaus or Gary Player—doesn't bother Lee Trevino, who might stake valid claims himself.

"I don't care who is No. 1 as long as my banker keeps talking to me," the loquacious Latin said Friday after posting a second-round 66 and moving into contention in the PGA National Golf Championship.

"You can't take it with you, you know. I never saw a Brink's truck following a funeral procession."

A month ago at the British Open in Lytham and St. Anne's, Trevino was down in the dumps. He said he was sick and tired of golf. He didn't want to be famous. He wanted to go off and hide some place for six months.

"I'm tired of not having any privacy," he said. "I get fed up with people coming up to me and my family in restaurants and wanting to know about Palmer and Nicklaus and talk shop."

Now Lee has undergone a radical psychological change.

"When you shoot 66, golf is fun," he said. "When you shoot 75, you're miserable."

Trevino, who for the past year went through a period of moodiness which saw him, uncharacteristically avoid crowds and newspaper reporters, is his old swashbuckling, jabbering self.

Instead of parking a trailer near the course and boycotting the clubhouse and locker room, he has returned to the confirmed extrovert—talking up a storm.

"I was paired with Tony Jacklin one day," he said, "and Jacklin told me on the first tee: 'I don't want to talk today.' I told him, 'I don't care. I'll do the talking. All you have to do is listen.'"

Then Trevino added sagely:

"If you keep your mouth closed all day, you get bad breath."

The colorful Mexican-American, who won two U.S. Opens and two British Opens in the span of five years, said he gets into emotional binds because he can't say, "No."

"Somebody asks me to play in a tournament, make an appearance or do a commercial and I always say yes," he said. "Then, when the time comes, I find my schedule is crammed."

"I can be so tired I can't stand it, but I've already given my word and so I have to go through with it."

Trevino said this not only works a hardship on him but also affects his family, which includes his wife Claudia, son Richard, 11; daughter Lesley Ann, 9, and sons, Tony, 5, and Troy, 11 months.

"I haven't even been able to take my family on a vacation this year," he said. "When Claudia goes back to school and her friends ask her what she did this summer what can she tell them: 'I went and watched some stupid golf tournament in Hartford.'"

Lee said even if he wanted to hide for six months, it wouldn't work.

"Somebody would find me," he added, "and, even if they didn't, after about two days, I would be looking for them."

putt at the 575-yard eighth.

He birdied from 25 feet at the ninth and from 12 feet at No. 10. He missed a makeable birdie try at the 11th hole, then holed birdie putts from 14 feet at the 12th, 15 feet at the 13th and from 3 feet at the 610-yard 14th hole.

There, trying to make sure he kept the ball out of the thick rough, Player used a 3-iron off the tee, then hit another 3-iron for his second shot, which he pushed into the right rough. But he recovered with a superb 9-iron approach that hit just behind the flagstick and stopped immediately.

At 17, Player had an "impossible lie" in the rough that resulted in his bogey.

"I was about a foot in the rough and decided to gamble," Player said, admitting he was disappointed the gamble failed and he lost a chance to hold the tournament record by himself.

"I would like to have had a par at 17 to have that record," he said.

Cole, the South African Open champion who's tied with Player at 137, had a 68 Friday that included birdies on two of the last three holes.

PACKERS MADE BID FOR FORD

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — It was noted Friday that President Gerald Ford recalled here two years ago in a speech that he had been offered a chance to play for the Green Bay Packers in the 1950s.

Ford said he got a call from the late founder and coach of the Packers, Curly Lambeau, offering him a chance with the Packers at $85 a game. Ford was a center at Michigan.

"I turned him down, and I think I made the right decision," Ford said. The occasion was a retirement party for former congressman and Ford's close friend, John Byrnes, Green Bay.

Pro cage stars outlast UCLA

Jim Price of the Lakers scored 27 points, 11 in the closing minutes Friday night, as a team of professional All-Stars defeated the UCLA Alumni, 114-111, in the annual Ralph Bunche Scholarship Fund basketball game before a crowd of 12,500 at Pauley Pavilion.

Price, a third year pro from Louisville, also had three key steals and two rebounds in the final period.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, bothered most of the night by Capitol's Elvin Hayes, scored 25 points, as did Sidney Wicks who now plays for Portland to lead UCLA.

Bill Walton of the Bruins and Julius Erving of the New York Nets did not play to avoid aggravating previous injuries.

RAMS—

God's will that I be in camp. As a Christian, you are to obey your master, and even more so if your master (Landry) is a Christian."

Hadl may miss Harold Jackson, who is playing part-time quarterback for the striking veterans in their drills at Long Beach State, but Waters won't. Waters was the victim of Hadl's four TD throws to Jackson in the league game a year ago.

The Cowboys also feature the NFL's No. 1 draftee, defensive end Ed (Too Tall) Jones. The 6-8 great from Tennessee State blocked one of George Blanda's extra point attempts and twice sacked the quarterback.

He'll have to hustle to get at Hadl, who may not be around long after only one week of work.

"He probably won't go a full half," says coach Chuck Knox, who himself missed some practice this week to visit his critically ill mother in Ohio. "But he's throwing the ball well, and he's throwing every pattern we have in."

But the last thing Hadl is concerned about is a renewal of a duel with Staubach.

"I'm just trying to get ready for Denver," says the all-pro quarterback, referring to the Rams' league opener Sept. 15.

Which means that he's taking the game less seriously than, say, Pearl Harbor.

Morrall says NFLPA should 'fire' Garvey

MIAMI (UPI) — Veteran quarterback Earl Morrall of the Miami Dolphins said Friday "Ed Garvey should be fired" as executive secretary of the NFL Players Association.

"The only way we're going to settle this strike quickly is with responsible and reasonable leadership," said the 40-year-old Morrall, who is a charter member of the NFLPA.

"Garvey is more concerned with his own image than about the players he represents. That is why I crossed the picket line early. It was my way of protesting Garvey's strong-arm tactics in this strike."

"I look at all the demands (of the NFLPA) and I just don't believe in all of them," Morrall said.

"Football has been too good to me to want to be part of an organization bent on destroying the sport."

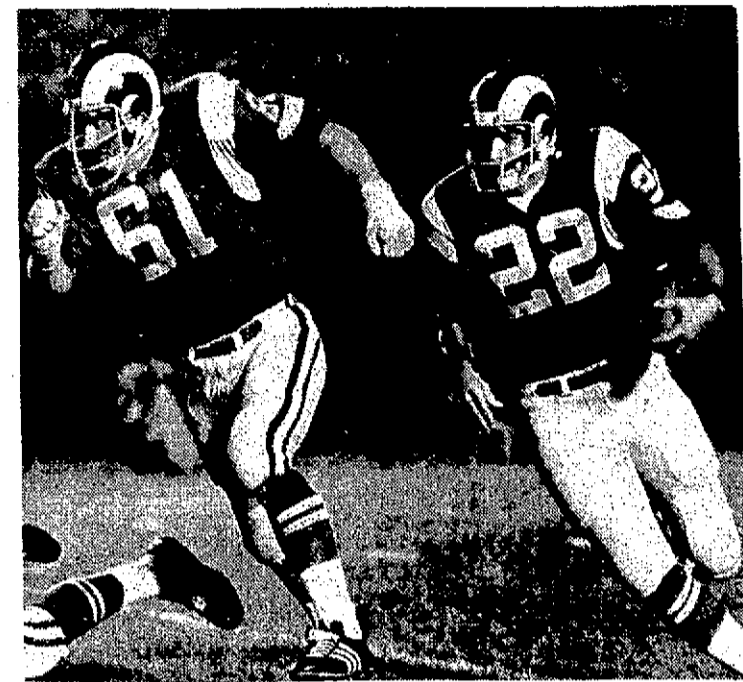

"Garvey's tactics have made us players look bad in the eyes of the public," the veteran quarterback added. "The public held us in high esteem and now the strike has brought us down to the level of a longshoremen's union."

Lopez added to Olympic card

Danny (Little Red) Lopez, who knocked out Masanao Toyoshima of Japan Thursday night, was added Friday to fight on the Sept. 7 Olympic Auditorium card headed by Bobby Chacon and Alfredo Marciano.

Chacon, from Sylmar, Calif., and Marciano, from Venezuela, meet in a scheduled 15-round bout for the vacant World Boxing Council featherweight championship.

Rankin (and caddie) lead

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — "When you play golf in England, don't argue with your caddie," said 29-year-old Judy Rankin of Midland, Tex. "He usually knows best."

Mrs. Rankin went into the last round of the European Open Women's Championship today leading by two strokes over Betsy Cullen of Tulsa.

She went around Sunningdale's 6,227-yard par-72 course, avoiding the heather clumps and the sand traps, in one-over par 73 Friday for a two-round total of 145. She said her caddie, Ron Mullins, had a lot to do with her success.

Mullins is one of the best known caddies of the British circuit. He knows Sunningdale like the back of his unburned hands.

"We had quite a few arguments during the round," Mrs. Rankin said. "He was always advising me when I could carry the green and when I couldn't. Sometimes I thought he was wrong. But when he won the argument I usually did well."

"We had quite a furious fight at the 17th, where he wanted me to use a six iron to get over a sand trap. I didn't think it would do. But he won—and I cleared the trap and got a par four."

Vandy's Flash not for slowpokes

Flight 109 chases 4th win

Flight 109, owner of the two fastest 350-yard times of the meeting, goes after his fourth stakes victory of the summer season tonight at Los Alamitos in the 10th running of the $10,000 Vandy's Flash, named in honor of Los Alamitos' 350-yard track record holder.

Flight 109 and his seven opponents all could use the Vandy's Flash as a stepping stone to the $100,000 Los Alamitos Championship and another confrontation with Charger Bar next Saturday.

Flight 109 was a disappointing last in the eight-horse, $50,000 Go Man Go Handicap in his last start but before that won three consecutive stakes races in July.

The seven-year-old gelding began the month of July with a record-setting performance in the Firecracker Express, setting a 300-yard track record of 15.41 seconds. He then added victories in both the Clabbertown G. and Hard Twist Stakes, turning in 350-yard clockings of 17.62 and 17.63, little more than a tenth of a second off Vandy's Flash's 14-year-old track standard of 17.50.

Flight 109, winner of more than $17,000 in half a dozen starts this year, finished second as the odds-on favorite back of Plunder Bay in the Vandy's Flash last year and will be asked to carry high-weight of 124 pounds tonight. Danny Cardoza will handle the riding chores.

Others in the field include Five Chics, Smooth Coin, Gray Dancer, Gold Copy, Jet Creek, Dusty Parr and Chic Pat Go.

Five Chics will be making his first start since running fifth in the $92,700 Vessels Maturity. John Watson will do the riding on the entrant of Flight 109.

Leading trainer D. Wayne Lukas has two other horses in the Vandy's Flash besides Flight 109 and Five Chics—Smooth Coin and Gray Dancer. Smooth Coin, nation's champion 3-year-old filly last season, will have Jim Brooks aboard while Gray Dancer gets Steve Treasure.

Jet Creek, second fastest qualifier for the Vessels Maturity, will be making his third start of the week tonight.

Chris Evert seeks fifth win in row

Combined News Services

Filly sensation Chris Evert, seeking her fifth successive triumph, heads the field today in the 94th Alabama Stakes at Saratoga during one of the richest weekends of the thoroughbred racing season.

With the $56,100 Alabama dominated by Chris Evert, the $144,995 Sapping at Monmouth Park—the track's richest race ever—displays a host of 2-year-olds fighting for the leadership of their class.

At least two other expensive races are also on the menu—the $50,000-added Signature at Liberty Bell and the $50,000-added Washington Park Handicap at Arlington Park. The $115,700 Delaware Handicap, meanwhile, is set for Sunday at Delaware Park.

Chris Evert, winner of the Triple Crown for fillies, battles seven other distaff 3-year-olds in the Alabama at 1 1/4 miles.

Rider Jorge Velazquez wants to duplicate his victories aboard Chris Evert in the Coaching Club American Oaks, the Mother Goose and a division of the Acorn. He also directed the filly sensation to an surprisingly easy win in a $350,000 match race against Miss Musket.

At Liberty Bell, Dan Lasater's Hot n Nasty will face five other 2-year-old fillies in the six-furlong Signature with Leslie Combs II's Myrtewood Beach expected to provide the strongest competition.

Among the other key races scheduled today are the $20,000-added Grassland at Calder for 3-year-olds at one mile on the turf and the $15,000-added Mac O'Dowd Memorial at Rockingham Park for 3-year-olds and up at 11-16 miles.

Speedster Beira Del Mar entry for Crosby 'Cap

DEL MAR—Beira, co-holder of the six-furlong track record at Hollywood Park, will test the Del Mar racing strip for the first time today when he heads a field of nine in the $20,000-added Bing Crosby Handicap.

The six-furlong dash also attracted Cherry River, a speedster who won a pair of sprints at Hollywood and was a length behind Beira in the 5 1/2-furlong Hollywood Express.

Stretch-running Palladium, beaten by only a head in the Express while finishing in front of both Beira and Cherry River, is also in the field which is completed by Rise High, Tragic Isle, Governor Max, Selecting, Against The Snow and Bensadream.

Bill Mahoney has been chosen to ride Beira, 123-pound highweight in the field, and the five-year-old will break from the No. 1 post position.

In the opening-day Premiere Handicap Beira ran what was probably the best race of his career as he scored by almost three lengths in 1:07 4/5, matching Time To Leave's track mark.

Although winless since then, Beira's performance in the Express under 122 pounds was good enough to warrant high impost for the Crosby.

Cherry River, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, and Tragic Isle (Francisco Mena) are each weighted at 121 pounds. Tragic Isle, in a photo finish for fourth with Cherry River in the Express, upset Beira to take the All American Handicap at Golden Gate Fields in his previous start.

Consistent Mismoyola, fresh from strong sprint races at Hollywood Park, fought off the prolonged stretch challenge of long-shot Wingo Belle to win the headlined $11,000 San Diego Jesters Club Purse Friday before 11,748 fans.

Sent to the lead shortly after the break by jockey Wayne Harris, Mismoyola shook off Hooley Ruley turning into the stretch and then outfinished Wingo Belle by 1 1/2 lengths to score in 1:09 2/5 for the six furlongs.

HOPE FOR THE OLD WORLD YET

ATLANTA (UPI) — A Little League team which came all the way from Puerto Rico to play in a World Series tournament, then found it had been disqualified, will be playing after all — but in Miami.

Jody Powell, press secretary for Gov. Jimmy Carter, said arrangements had been made to fly the 20 boys, age 11 and 12, to Miami where they will be housed and cared for while taking part in a local tourney.

The team is the Puerto Rico division champion in the Pee Wee Reese Little League class, and the problem arose when the Puerto Rican Little League commissioner sent a bad check to cover the team's entry fee here, Powell said.

"The league's national office told the commissioner not to send any teams but the teams never got the message," he said.

Carter's office arranged for tickets so the boys could go to Six Flags Over Georgia and mayor Maynard Jackson provided transportation.

In the meantime, Powell said, some people who preferred to remain anonymous had arranged to pay the extra cost involved to fly the boys to Miami for a tournament in that city.

Sharp note to McPhail A's fans fear move to Seattle

OAKLAND (UPI) — A group of Oakland A's fans, aroused by reports the two-time world champions will be moved, Friday, sent a sharply worded letter to American League president Lee McPhail, demanding that he issue a statement under penalty of perjury that the A's will not be moved.

GARDENING

Festuca grass for the sun

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

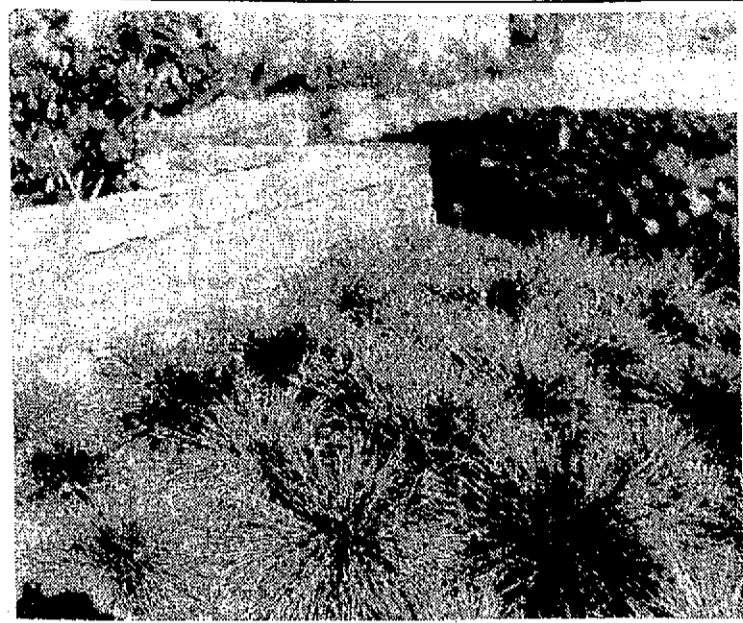

As Mondo grass is used for landscape planting in the shade gardens under trees, for edging and for ground cover, Festuca grass is used in sunny areas. It also may be planted on burns (planted mounds of soil).

Festuca glauca "Blue Fescue" is an ornamental grass. It grows in 6 to 10 inch tufts of bluegreen hair-like leaves. It won't tolerate constant soil wetness, may be sheared back, and tolerates cold down to 10 degrees above zero. It may be propagated by divisions. Actually, small pony packs plants can be planted close together to form a dense ground cover.

Another mounding growing plant is the hybrid Gazania. It loves all the sun it can get and flowers freely during the active growing summer season. The daisy-like blossoms in shades of white, bronze, yellow and orange add bright splashes of color. Plants set closer together form a ground cover. They're ideal for parking planting. The plants must be kept on the dry side, yet when watered, should get a quenching drink. This means they need eight to ten inches water penetration. They need light feedings about every two months from March through October.

Right now is a good time to set out any plants so they'll grow actively during the hot weather, developing a good root system before cold weather sets in.

Bare soil areas around plants of any kind need to be covered with a top dressing, such as compost soil, manure, or a fine organic material. The soil should be watered a day or two before applying the material. The soil should be lightly scratched up before the material is spread over it, then slowly but thoroughly watered. The top dressing smothers any possible weed seeds that might be sprouting about that time, retains moisture longer and thereby saves frequency of watering, and keeps the soil cooler.

Flea beetles — At long last, our 33 year old dichondra lawn finally was attacked by flea beetles. They had a merry convention there for nearly three weeks. By keeping the lawn thoroughly soaked we held those pests at bay until it was possible to spray the area with two kinds of lawn insecticides. The spraying stopped them dead!

The first symptom of the flea beetles were irregular patches that looked dry as though they weren't watered. Smaller spots then began to die out as if fungus had attacked the lawn. Now, the sprayed lawn looks like a moth-eaten rug. Happily it is recovering.

Speaking of lawns, the gardener who is thinking of planting hybrid bermuda from stolons (which are runner-branch sprigs that have joints from which sprouts grow) should plant it as quickly as possible. A lawn planted now will get a good start before cold weather sets in.

The gardener who plans to sow dichondra also should do it quickly, even if he plants a sod lawn. The planted or sown lawn should be top dressed with five sacks of quality steer manure (or a fine organic material) per each 1,000 square feet. Such materials maintain a more even moisture, yet provide a gentle feeding action.

A lawn should never be seeded or planted if the soil is dry. It should be soaked at least eight inches deep in order to maintain the moisture. The newly planted lawn should be kept moist until growth is up to mowing size. That deep soaking before planting stimulates the roots to grow deeper.

Naturally, the gardener works some form of organic material into the soil, whether the old weedy lawn is being replaced or a new lawn is being planted.

Water, water everywhere

"Water, water, everywhere. Nor any drop to drink."

Although that was the lament of the Ancient Mariner, it can be echoed by plants in the gardens of people who just don't seem to understand what water is all about, or how to use it. We'll try to explain.

Unless you live in the desert, where plants have learned to store whatever there is, and manage to hang on to it; or in the jungle, where some plants get their moisture from the humid atmosphere via aerial roots, you are stuck with an on-going irrigation program in your garden. Water is absorbed by tiny "feeder" roots and passed along cell-to-cell through the plant. In the process, it supplies the fluid for food manufacture (with chlorophyll) and additional growth.

UFW strike of tomato fields eyed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An organizer for the United Farm Workers said Friday the union may strike tomato growers in a four-county area if they fail to recognize the UFW as the workers' representative.

Al Rojas, director of the UFW's Northern California organizing committee, said if growers fail to agree to negotiate with the UFW by noon Sunday, union supporters will hold a strike vote.

Rojas told reporters that Cesar Chavez, the union's leader, will attend the rally along with thousands of workers from the four counties affected by the proposed strike — Yolo, Sacramento, Solano and Sutter.

If the growers won't recognize the UFW, Rojas said "that leaves us with no alternative, possibly, but strike activity."

He added the UFW would agree to a government-supervised secret ballot election to decide union representation if growers "want to go that route."

There are 90,000 acres of canning tomato fields in those four counties, Rojas said. He said the UFW's rival union, the Teamsters, now holds no contracts in the area.

But he said UFW sources had learned that "secret sessions are being held now between teamsters and growers."

The statement by Rojas came after a recent series of clashes in tomato fields near Stockton. The disputes have spawned several arrests.

L.B. doctor denied medicine he used on stricken athlete

By BEN ZINER
Medical-Science Editor

An experimental drug for low back pain has been denied a veteran Long Beach orthopedic surgeon because he used it a second time on a big-league baseball player.

Guidelines for use of the drug, chymopapain, forbid injection of the compound more than one time in an individual because of the danger of allergic reaction.

The patient who was given a second injection of chymopapain is Bill Melton, third baseman for the Chicago White Sox. He had been sidelined for most of one season.

He was first injected with the drug by Dr. Lyman Smith, Elgin, Ill., originator of the procedure to treat ruptured lumbar disks by enzyme injection.

According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, the first attempt gave only partial relief.

So Smith and Dr. Leon L. Wiltse, the latter of Long Beach, performed a second procedure, this time at Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach.

Melton has said publicly that he feels he would not be playing baseball had not the second injection been given.

Travenol Laboratories, which makes the enzyme, learned of the alleged infraction and has refused to supply any more chymopapain to either Wiltse or Smith.

Wiltse has performed several hundred chymopapain injections. Patients including physicians with back trouble, have come to Long Beach from all over the country for the procedure.

The procedure spares the patient the necessity for a back operation such as a spinal fusion.

Wiltse is in South Africa on a speaking tour and could not be reached for a statement. His office said, however, that his supply of chymopapain was cut off early in June.

Ironically, it was Smith who originally advised against repeat injections, for fear of allergic reaction. Smith came to Long Beach to be on hand for Melton's second injection, according to Wiltse's office.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has taken no action.

Chymopapain is expected to be released for general use by surgeons shortly. If that is the case, Wiltse and Smith will then have no trouble obtaining the compound.

Dr. Alan Lisook, medical officer of the FDA's Office of Scientific Evaluation, said that when chymopapain is released it will be available only to "qualified" surgeons who have been trained in the injection technique. Wiltse and Smith are the pioneer users of the enzyme.

Chymopapain dissolves the affected tissue in the back area, to relieve pressure on nerves and thus abolish pain.

Shark warnings off Southland

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It has been 11 months since a white shark caught and killed someone off the western shoreline of North America, but new warnings are being sounded.

The water is unusually warm, drawing the deadly man-eaters closer to land.

Two white sharks were trapped in fishermen's nets near La Jolla within a week's time last month.

A diver at Scripps Institution of Oceanography said the first shark, a four-footer, was caught. But he said an eight-footer escaped.

"We have sharks continuously out here," said James Stewart, Scripps' chief diver. "Remember a few weeks back when all the squid were coming ashore? One morning I went out and counted 62 blue sharks and a hammerhead — and the beach was just full of people."

But Stewart says sharks are common off Southern California in summer and seldom attack. "It's obvious that sharks don't find humans very tasty," he said Friday.

A Los Angeles spear fisherman died as a result of the attack last Sept. 11 off a Mexican beach 237 miles south of San Diego.
